STEAMERS IN COLLISION NEAR STATUE OF LIBERTY

Twenty-Five Are Saved By Crew Of Ferry Boats

Collision Occurs Half Mile South Of Statue Of Liberty Early This Morning

FREIGHTER SINKS SOON AFTER CRASH

Liner Paris Was Bound For Cherbourg, But Is Forced To Return To New York

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The French liner Paris, seventh largest vessel in the world, rammed the Norwegian freighter Besseggen about a half mile south of the Statue of Liberty early today and sent her to the bottom in less than 30 minutes. The Paris was on her way down the harbor bound for Cherbourg.

Eight of the thirty-three persons aboard the freighter were missing after several hours of heroic rescue work by the crew of ferryboats, which had rushed to the assistance of the stricken steamship when the siren of the Paris screamed for help. Twenty-five were saved.

Among the twenty-five to be rescued were Captain Ludwig Hassell, thirty-six, his wife, Gudrun, and his four-year old daughter Arne. They were picked up by the crew of the ferryboat Brooklyn.

Crash Unavoidable

The Paris left her pier at the foot of West Thirteenth street at 1:30 a. m. As she proceeded down the main channel she picked up speed. Suddenly across her path the Besseggen loomed. It was too late to avoid a crash. The keen bow of the Paris clove the Norwegian vessel amidships, shivered and came to a stop.

Before boats could be launched the Besseggen went down by the stern, a few members of her crew clinging to the bow as it pointed skyward and disappeared.

Only those having ready access to the deck were able to get away at once. The stokers and engineers below—were trapped.

At first it was reported that nineteen men were drowned.

The ferry boat Brooklyn, southbound from the battery to St. George, was the first vessel to reach the scene. On the orders of the ferry boat captain, nearly all the members of the small crew were assigned to lifeboat duty, dropping boats overside and searching over the waters with little to guide them in their rescue work but screams of the freighter's crew.

Scene Of Terror

Mad excitement prevailed on the ferry boat in the meantime. Carrying comparatively large number of passengers, the ferry was a scene of terror. Several women, of whom were a considerable number aboard, fainted. There were several fist fights among frantic men, who punched and clawed each other without reason.

In the meantime there arrived on the scene the American Legion, another ferry, and a Baltimore and Ohio

LEADS FROSH IN "GREEN" BATTLE

Miss Louise Callahan, Irish and smiling, is helping revive the "green" tradition among Salt Lake City co-eds. The green cap tradition was abolished two years ago by the board of regents, of Latter Day Saints University. Several vain attempts have been made to revive the tradition. Now the freshmen, themselves, the co-eds most concerned with the edict, have taken a stand and under Miss Callahan's leadership they plan to restore the green freshman hat to its place on the campus.

EPOCHAL STATE SABBATH SCHOOL CONVENTION ENDS WITH 4000 AT MEETING

Closing Session Friday Evening Finds Audience Packing Cathedral

Memorable Addresses Are Made; Convention Is Notable Success

With another capacity crowd in attendance, the 65th annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association came to an end Friday evening in the Scottish Rite Cathedral. From the state officers down to the humblest delegate, the opinion was unanimous that this was the greatest convention in the history of the association.

Speakers, teachers, workers, all seemed to catch the enthusiasm generated by this remarkable outpouring of Christian workers, and it will be some time before the memory of the convention fades.

Usually the last session of any convention is sparsely attended. Delegates from far out points must get home, others are preparing to leave, and the local people sometimes tire of even the best things. Not so with this convention. It opened to a crowded house and it closed to an even more crowded house. An estimate of the crowd Friday evening would be close to 4,000.

Appreciation Voiced

The appreciation of the state officers and the delegates was publicly voiced Friday evening when H. C. Heckerman, fifth vice president of the association and chairman of the closing night's performance, called to the platform the various commit-

Flights Still Hold Interest

Many Big Aviation Feats Occupy Attention Of World

SEVERAL WOMEN FIGURE IN FEATS

(International News Service)

Aviation continues to hold the interest of the world, with trans-Atlantic flying still the topic of international discussion.

Miss Ruth Elder and Captain George Haldeman arrived at Horta, the Azores, today after a thrilling rescue in mid-ocean, when their trans-Atlantic plane made a forced landing in the ocean more than 300 miles from land.

Diedonne Coste and Lieut. Lebrix arrived at Natal shortly after midnight on a trans-Atlantic flight from Senegal. Propeller trouble threatened them with the possibility of a forced landing when off the coast of Brazil.

Fritz Loose and Lilli Dillenz, Viennese actress, are at Horta awaiting favorable weather to continue their flight across the Atlantic in a Junkers sea plane.

Mrs. Keith Miller, an English woman, is making a flight from Croydon to Australia, the longest flight ever attempted by a woman.

Mrs. Frances Grayson is at Old Orchard, Me., awaiting suitable weather for a flight to Copenhagen.

Short Circuit Is Cause Of Fire Loss

Firemen were called to the Devlin Block, 244 East Washington street, last night about 7:15 o'clock by an alarm from box 26.

A short circuit in the wiring of the fuse box on the second floor at the head of the stairway, had caused a small blaze at that point. The firemen put out the fire with chemicals. The loss is estimated at $75.

The building is occupied by the office of Dr. Cleeland, the Ververi fruit stand, Valis confectionery store and other places of business and offices.

Sixteen Dead After Crash At Indianapolis

Fast Interurban Car Crashes Into Loaded Bus On Grade Crossing

NINETEEN PERSONS REPORTED INJURED

Crew Of Interurban Car Ordered Arrested Following Accident; Plan Probe

(International News Service)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 15.—Sixteen dead, six believed to be fatally injured and thirteen others seriously hurt was the toll today of one of Indiana's most disastrous grade crossing accidents.

An inbound traction company car traveling sixty miles per hour, last night leaped into a truck and trailer carrying more than sixty members of the Sahara Grotto to a barn dance at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

The interurban car, said to be going 60 miles an hour, struck the crowded trailer at the 21st street and Emerson avenue crossing, on the outskirts of Indianapolis.

Thirteen of the victims were killed outright. Robert Dallas and Mrs. Frank Meredith died several hours later in a local hospital. Several others of the more seriously injured are not expected to live.

Trailer Demolished

The demolished trailer was attached to a bus, also crowded with passengers. The bus had cleared the crossing but the trailer was midway on the tracks when the speeding interurban crashed into it.

The front end of the interurban was demolished but only the motorman and conductor were reported hurt.

The motorman, at the City hospital, said he whistled for the crossing and didn't see the truck until he was about forty feet from it.

One of the most pathetic survivors of the crash was Mrs. Von Glascock who lost five members of her family in the accident. She lost her husband who was killed instantly, her sister Opal Merriman, her brother, Lee Merriman and her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Meredith. Mrs. Merriman, her sister in law, was seriously injured and may die.

WILL BE DEDICATED ON SUNDAY

NEW CHURCH BUILDING OF THIRD U. P. CONGREGATION

Dr. Montgomery Of Muskingum To Make Address

New Third U. P. Church Building To Be Used On Sunday

RECORD CROWDS ARE ANTICIPATED

Services On Sunday Inaugurate Program Of Two Weeks

Dedication of the magnificent new Third United Presbyterian church, located at the corner of East Washington and Adams streets, of which Rev. S. B. Copeland is pastor, will take place Sunday, Oct. 16, with appropriate services.

Rev. J. Knox Montgomery, D. D., president of Muskingum college at New Concord, O., will deliver the dedicatory sermon at both the morning and evening services.

In the morning at 11 o'clock, Dr. Montgomery will speak on the subject "A House of Prayer" and in the evening at 7:30 his subject will be "The Church's Biggest Business."

Musical selections by a vested choir augmented to 40 voices under the direction of the chorister, David West, with Mrs. Francis N. Eakin at the organ will be outstanding features of the services.

Expect Immense Crowd.

A special effort is being made to take care of the immense crowd which is expected to attend the services. A microphone has been placed on the pulpit and amplifiers installed in various parts of the building especially in the large banquet hall which will seat about 600.

The completion of this handsome church edifice in the east side of the city, in the residential district, is the consummation of the efforts of many years on the part of the congregation. When the old church building on East Washington and Beckford streets became entirely inadequate for the large and growing congregation, steps were taken to provide a new place of worship. The corner stone laying for the new church took place November 7, 1926, not quite a year ago.

Over 800 Members.

Although the Third U. P. church has been in existence only 27 years, it has moved forward with rapid strides until it is now one of the most progressive churches in the city with a membership of over 800 and a membership of 810 in the Bible school.

The first reference to the field which is now occupied by the Third church is found in the minutes of Beaver Valley Presbytery under the date of October 25, 1898, at a meeting held in the Oak Grove U. P. church.

Rev. T. L. Rose, at this time pastor of Center U. P. church, saw the great need and possibilities of a church in this community.

A store room on Lathrop street was rented and a Sunday school organized. Thus a congregation was organized with the following charter members: W. S. Taylor, Mrs. Mary Taylor, W. R. McClaren, Mrs. Mary J. McClaren, H. L. Palmer, Mrs. Lizzie M. Woodling, James W. Woodling, Chas. B. Brooks, Mrs. Catherine Brooks, Miss Flora Campbell, Walter S. Gib-

SARGENT HOLDS CARROLL'S FATE

Attorney-General Will Announce Soon Decision Reached By Parole Board

(International News Service)

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 15.—The fate of Earl Carroll, New York theatrical producer, who is seeking a parole after serving one third of his sentence for perjury, rested today with Attorney General Sargent.

Carroll, ruddy and apparently in good health, appeared before the parole board in his own behalf, but what was said was kept in strict secrecy. The board it was understood, has made its recommendation to the attorney general who will announce the decision soon.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 15. — The Department of Highways have authorized additional road improvement work under the state reward plan in Westmoreland, as follows:

HALLOWE'EN CELEBRATION PLANS ARE PROGRESSING

Hallowe'en in New Castle will be celebrated this year with a huge parade, a street dance, and a typical night of hilarity according to an announcement today by Henry Goldberg who will be in charge as the general chairman of the events.

Acting in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Goldberg has named a list of committees for the evening's fun and these committees expect to build a list of events that will mark this year's celebration as one of the best ever held.

Edward Pritchard, Marshal.

For the Grand Marshal of the Mummers' parade, Mr. Goldberg has named Edward Pritchard, whose experience in marshaling troops as a sergeant with the 332nd Infantry will come in handy.

For his aides Mr. Pritchard has named a list of ex-service men who can be depended upon to keep the mummers in line in a formation that will look like a parade and not like a riot. The aides are Earl P. Toler, Edwin C. Hoye, Samuel Rohrer, De Graff Robinson, Bernard Hook, John Jones, L. B. McAneny, James Brice and Thomas Thornton.

The prize committee will consist of Miss Martha Bigley, Mrs. C. C. Buzzard, Mrs. W. D. Smith and Miss Mary Harvard. The judges will be Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Pyle, Mr. and Mrs. C. Ed Brown, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Pearsall and Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Tully.

The music committee will consist of LaVerne Irvine, A. S. Hofmeister and D. D. Potter. The chairman of the street dance will be George Bechtol, who will name his own aides.

The committee in charge of passing out the prize tickets after the selection by the judges will be Al Simpson, chairman, Frank Plush, N. E. Burton, T. S. McCoy, John Gibbons, W. D. Ebert, J. S. Lipman and A. Frank.

Dayton Squad Reaches City

GREAT GAME IS IN PROSPECT HERE

A squad of twenty football players, representing Dayton Steele High arrived in New Castle last night at 11:30 o'clock over the Pennsylvania. Included in the party was Coach Jackson M. Keefer and Faculty Manager George E. Eastman.

The Dayton team took up their headquarters at The Castleton hotel and the boys were put to bed shortly after their arrival in this city. The Dayton team departed from the Ohio city at 2:50 o'clock on Friday afternoon. The team members were in fine spirits despite the long, tiresome journey.

"I have a light and fast combination this year," said Coach Keefer today in an interview with a New Castle News man, and we expect a hard

MISS ELDER AND PLANE PILOT GEORGE HALDEMAN LAND AT AZORES ISLAND

(International News Service)

HORTA, the Azores, Oct 15.—Miss Ruth Elder and George Haldeman arrived here early today aboard the Dutch oil tanker Barendrecht, which rescued them at sea when their plane, American Girl, was forced down due to a broken oil feed.

They explained that they came down approximately 380 miles northwest of the island of Fayal, one of the Azores, due principally to the failure of the pressure pump on their plane.

Greeted by Crowd

Highest officialdom of the islands, thousands of residents and even peasants from far back in the hills were on hand at the quay when the Barendrecht steamed into port.

Also on hand to meet the daring girl flier was another of her sex who has gone in for aviation on a trans-atlantic scale. This was Lillie Dillenz, the Viennese actress, who covered 900 miles of her trans-oceanic flight from Europe to the United States as a passenger on the Junkers plane which arrived here from Lisbon.

It was understood here that Miss Elder and Haldeman will proceed tomorrow to Lisbon and from there go to Paris, their original destination.

Agents and messages from various steamship companies were here offering the fliers free transportation to either side of the Atlantic.

Rain fell in torrents while the Barendrecht was docking.

FOIL ATTEMPT TO GAIN $13,000

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15—Five bandits killed Thomas Kennedy, 50, a guard of the Belmont Trust company and wounded two of his companions in a daring but futile attempt to rob them of $13,000 in front of the company's branch office here today.

One of the bandits is believed to have been shot in the leg. He was aided into a black sedan by his companions who then drove away.

Policeman William Houch was felled by one of the robbers as he sought to protect William Lindsey, 45, one of the messengers, who had been shot through the leg and back, falling on the money bag he had been carrying. Lindsey is in a serious condition in a hospital.

The other bank employe wounded is Raymond J. Kelter, 24, a teller, who received a flesh wound in the right ankle.

Kennedy, a former policeman, was shot through the heart, dying instantly.

Industries Fight For New Freight Rate To Seaboard

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 15.—A movement was under way here today by representatives of steel, iron and coal industries in the Pittsburgh, Youngstown and Cleveland districts to secure a more favorable freight rate on products shipped to the Atlantic Seaboard for export.

At a series meeting in the Chamber of Commerce here it was decided to seek more favorable rates also for shipments destined to Memphis, New Orleans and other Mississippi valley points to bring about a more equitable relationship with reduced rates from Chicago to the same destinations, made some time ago.

Dear Fred:

For simon pure pessimists among the folks I know, a football coach without a doubt, takes down the well known dough. No matter what his team is like, how fast or strong or smart, you ask him how he thinks they'll do, and will the first string start. And usually he answers you in sentences down cast, the team is weak, the backs are sick, the tackles are not fast. The team play is most miserable, the captain is a flop, the guards will have their hands all full the other lads to stop. But when the team goes out to play they pass and kick and run, and score at will until you ask, I wonder when they're done. But does the coach excited get, and tell you of their play, he never does, he says its luck, its sixty-eight today

Stage Set For Fall-Sinclair Trial Monday

LONG DRAWN-OUT TRIAL EXPECTED

Fall-Sinclair Face Charge Of Conspiring To Defraud Government Of Oil Leases

By GEORGE E. DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Principals and supporting cast for what is to go down as one of the outstanding criminal trials in American legal history were assembled in Washington today impatiently awaiting the "oyez" of the court bailiff.

On Monday, former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair, multi-millionaire oil operator and turfman, face the bar of justice charged with criminally conspiring to defraud the government of the rich Teapot Dome oil fields of the naval reserve. Both were today closeted with their "million dollar" array of counsel going over last-minute details and mapping out the strategy of their defense, while a few blocks away Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts, special federal oil counsel, were completing the last small details of their case.

A long drawn-out trial is expected. To begin with, great trouble will be experienced in securing a jury. The action of the U. S. supreme court last Monday in voiding the Teapot Dome lease as "shot with fraud" was a blow to the defense, and difficulty will be had in obtaining 12 men who have not read that fact in the headlines of the papers. On the other hand, government counsel, still remembering the "boy jury" that acquitted Fall and E. L. Doheny on a similar charge, will move most cautious in their examination of veniremen.

Imposing Legal Array.

They have to draw from, already assembled, two regular criminal court panels and two circuit panels—a total of 104 men—but it is not at all unlikely that a special venire will have to be drawn before the "12 peers" are assembled.

An imposing group of lawyers has been assembled to defend Fall and Sinclair. At the head of Sinclair's counsel is Martin W. Littleton, the brilliant New York lawyer who defied the senate committee that first aired the oil scandals of 1923. He will be assisted by George Hoover, prominent Washington barrister. Fall's counsel is headed by William E. Leahy, one of the best known and successful lawyers in the capital, in conjunction with Mark Thompson of New Mexico, a lifelong friend of the former cabinet officer.

From present indications, the defense will, in the parlance of the court, "try a tight case" or in other words sit back and place the complete burden on the prosecution by keeping the defendants and other important witnesses off the stand.

The government is hampered by inability to get its hands on H. M. Blackmer, former chairman of the board of the Midwest Refining company, and James E. O'Neill, former president of the Prairie Oil & Gas company—both of whom would be key witnesses and consequently are remaining in Europe. Federal counsel therefore will seek to build up a mountain of circumstantial evidence designed to convince the jury that $230,500 of the profits of the now defunct continental trading was turned into Liberty bonds and handed over to Fall in exchange for the Sinclair lease on Teapot Dome.

SLIGHT ACCIDENT.

Mrs. L. H. Burnham of the Hileman apartment, reported Friday that she was driving west on East Washington street at Croton avenue when the car driven by Joe Bloise of 1231 East Brook street, going north on Croton avenue ran into and damaged her car.

TWENTY-FIVE SAVED BY CREW OF FERRY BOATS

The Paris picked up eight men.

The first personal stories of the survivors were given by Inglox Anderson and Axel Lundell, two of the seamen who were picked up by the American Legion and landed at the South Ferry slip.

The ship was anchored and many of the crew were sleeping when they were thrown from their bunks, the sailors said. Immediately water began running into the engine room.

They rushed on deck, where they found that several of the life-boats had been thrown from their davits. The ship settled so rapidly that it was impossible to launch any of the remaining boats and many jumped overboard.

Ferry Boat Rescues Many

A Staten Island ferry boat bound from New York, picked up a life boat containing thirteen men and landed them at the South Ferry Terminal. These survivors said that another boatload was picked up by a ferry bound for St. George. These two were the only boats launched, they said.

Some of the crew who were landed at South Ferry were treated by ambulance doctors for submersion.

Among the 360 passengers on the Paris who rushed from their staterooms and witnessed the tragedy were Maurice Tillier, director of the French Line, and Leopold Stokowski, of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

After assisting in the rescue work, the Paris picked up her boats, swung about and returned to her pier. It was said she would continue to Cherbourg after minor repairs were made.

The Paris, built at St. Nazaire, France in 1921, is owned by Compagnie Generale Transatlantique. She is 735 feet long, measures 85 feet across the beam and is of 34.569 tons registry.

The Besseggen is a steel freighter built in Osaka, Japan in 1916. She is 305 feet long, measures forty-three feet across the beam, and is of 3,143 tons registry. She is owned by the Jen Folkman's Redri Aktiengesellschaft and her home port is Skien, Norway.

MISS ELDER AND PILOT ARE LANDED AT AZORES ISLAND

Dutch consuls and officials of the American cable companies went on board to greet Miss Elder and the pilot of her machine.

Both Miss Elder and the pilot, George Haldeman, were on deck when the officials got aboard.

None Worse for Flight

HORTA, the Azores, Oct. 15.—"We are none the worse for the adventure and we are overwhelmed by the interest displayed in us."

Ruth Elder, bronzed by sea winds and smiling cheerfully, made this statement today to the throng of officials who welcomed her immediately upon her arrival on the S. S. Barendrecht, which rescued Miss Elder and her pilot, George Haldeman, when their transatlantic plane, "American Girl", was forced down at sea by a failing oil line.

The thrilling flight and the fortunate rescue constituted just another adventure for the American girl, who has been an aviatrix for several years and experienced many of the perils of the air, and who seemed to be but little concerned over her new experience with the perils of the sea.

With a leather "wind-cheater" buttoned closely around her to protect her from a driving rain, and still wearing the plus fours in which she dressed herself in Garden City before the flight across the ocean started, Miss Elder stood on the deck and gave a description of the flight and rescue which clearly indicated that she thought it was just one more adventure.

Pressure Pump Fails

"We had every hope of success until the derangement of the fuel pressure pump—two hours before we finally came down," Miss Elder explained. Here she paused to express the disappointment which both she and Haldeman have because of their failure to reach European shores.

Miss Elder paid high tribute to Captain Goos of the Barendrecht, who, she said, had apparently sighted the "American Girl", and realizing it was in trouble, had hauled his ship to and stood by to rescue the flyers.

"We were aboard the Barendrecht 15 minutes after we hit the ocean," Miss Elder explained when asked about the thrills of the ocean rescue, and she seemed to accept it all as a matter of course, but she appeared disappointed when she told of the destruction of her plane and its abandonment after it had caught fire.

Lost Credentials

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Ruth Elder and Captain George Haldeman are destitute for funds and their identification papers have been lost, William S. Doty, American consul in St. Michaels, Azores, cabled the State Department today.

He requested the department to urge Miss Elder's backers to cable funds immediately to the bank at Fayal, Azores. The money is needed to pay for passage of the aviators on a steamer to Europe and for general expenses.

Doty said that Fernando Dacosta, civil governor of the Azores, has granted all official courtesies to the fliers. The British vice consul at Horta also is assisting the fliers.

Miss Elder and Haldeman expect to leave on Monday on the Portuguese steamer Lima for Lisbon and then take a train for Paris, Doty declared.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—"I'll cable them plenty right away—they won't have to worry about money," T. H. McArdle, one of the promoters of the Elder-Haldeman flight, declared when informed today that the American consul in the Azores had cabled the State Department at Washington that Ruth Elder and George Haldeman are destitute of funds.

McArdle would not say how much he was sending, reiterating that it would be "plenty".

He said that beyond selling Miss Elder's story of the flight to a newspaper syndicate he has signed no contracts in her behalf.

Rev. Redmon preached from Psalm 85:6. Revive thy work again O Lord that thy people may rejoice in thee. The meetings will continue with the Sunday services, 10:45 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Sunday school, 9:30 a. m. The orchestra was on hand with splendid music to help the revival on. They played "Tell Me the Old Story" as an offertory number.

Col. Smith Here Monday Evening

Will Speak At Meeting Of Ex-Servicemen At Legion Home

Ex-service men are manifesting a lot of interest in the dinner which will take place Monday evening in the Legion Home when Col. LeRoy Smith of the general staff of the United States Army will be the speaker. The affair is being sponsored jointly by the Legion and the Officers Reserve Association.

Col. Smith is not a professional soldier, yet he served with distinction as a battalion commander during the World war. He was deep in business yet found time to graduate with honors from the Army Command and General Staff at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. As a church worker he attracted attention as the head of one of Los Angeles biggest Bible classes.

He is a brilliant platform man and the press comment over the entire country has been most flattering to him. The opportunity of hearing him here is one that the ex-service men are taking with avidity and he should have a crowd Monday evening.

The dinner and meeting will be presided over by District Deputy Commander Pat. J. Dempsey.

Pennsy R. R. Must Retain Agency At West Middlesex

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Oct. 15.—Permission to abandon its agency station at West Middlesex, Mercer county, sought by the Pennsylvania Railroad company operating the Erie and Pittsburgh railroad was denied in an order of the Public Service Commission today.

Exhibits before the commission showed that receipts at the agency for the first six months of 1927 exceeded the 1926 totals. The main object in abolishing the agency according to the railroad's testimony was the saving of approximately $2,200 annually, paid to the local agent.

To Be Speaker At Conference

Leaders In Red Cross Work To Address Regional Conference

MANY COUNTIES TO BE REPRESENTED

ROBERT E. BONDY

Robert E. Bondy will be one of the speakers at the Red Cross regional conference which is being held Tuesday, October 18, at The Castleton. Other interesting speakers at this conference will be Earl F. Gates and Miss Edith Peckman, all of Washington, D. C.

It is expected that about 100 will be present at the conference. Twenty-four chapters will be reprsented.

Mr. Bondy entered the Red Cross work in 1919, a year later was appointed director of chapter service for the former southwestern division. He later came to national headquarters in Washington as director of war service, from which position he was promoted to assistant to the vice chairman. In this position he has charge of all Red Cross work in eight states, namely, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana. He will continue as director of war service. Before entering Red Cross work, Mr. Bondy had wide experience as a newspaper man, later directing social surveys in Chicago and managing the social service bureau of the Columbus, O., Chamber of Commerce.

Earl F. Gates, another speaker of the day, is assistant director of public information and roll call and has served with the American Red Cross continuously for seven and a half years. Before coming to the Red Cross he had devoted himself principally to newspaper and publicity work in Massachusetts for 15 years. He joined the staff of the Boston Metropolitan chapter in late September, 1917, to direct the chapter publicity on part time while continuing on the staff of a Boston newspaper. In 1918 he resigned from the Boston Herald and partnership in a publicity business to give full time to the Red Cross. In 1919 he was appointed director of public information of the New England division and continued in that position four and a half years. He came to national headquarters in 1923.

Miss Edith Peckham, assistant to the director of the American Junior Red Cross, will speak at the conference. Before coming to Washington, Miss Peckham was for three years assistant director in the former New England division. Her experience in junior work dates back to the World war when she assisted in reorganizing this Red Cross service. Miss Peckham is an experienced teacher and has done executive work in normal schools in the west. Her wide experience and executive ability led to her appointment as assistant to the director of the American Junior Red Cross. This organization now comprises more than 5,000,000 American school boys and girls who are learning to be good citizens through its many world-wide activities.

Dry Law Offenders Sent To Prison

(International News Service)

CLEVELAND, Oct. 15.—Harry Eggleston and Arthur C. Lucas, of Canton, and Joseph Krismanich and Samuel Margolies, of Pittsburgh were sentenced to 15-months in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, and fined $250 each when they pleaded guilty in federal court today to charges of violating the prohibition laws.

The Canton men went to Pittsburgh several weeks ago and purchased a large quantity of whiskey from Margolies and Krismanich, according to their confession. They were transporting the stuff in an automobile, and the Pittsburgh men escorted them to the city limits.

The Ohio bootleggers then held up and robbed the other two, disabled their automobile, and fled with the whiskey, according to the allegations of the Pittsburghers.

They reported the robbery to Canton police.

fight this afternoon. The setback suffered by Dayton last week at the hands of Erie Academy High has instilled a fighting spirit into the Ohioans and they intend to settle their score with the Western Pennsylvania team today.

Well Pleased

Coach Keefer and Faculty Manager Eastman had several nice things to say regarding the treatment received here and also for the splendid accommodations offered at The Castleton. The Dayton team is the first football aggregation to make use of the beautiful new hostelry.

The Dayton team was up at 9:30 o'clock this morning and had breakfast at The Castleton dining room.

The game this afternoon will start at 2:30 o'clock and with the weather man favoring the football populace with an excellent day, the Franklin High stadium will be jammed to capacity strength today.

INVASION OF HOLLYWOOD

? can this foreign beauty capture U. S. movie fans ?

Everybody's heard about Cecile Sorel, famous French dramatic star, but few on this side know about Hilda Sorel, who is neither French nor dramatic.

The pulchritudinous Hilda, pictured here, is an Austrian. To be exact about it, she's a Viennese. She glitters from the silver screen in Central Europe, and her fame in that part of the world is secure.

Hilda goes in for light comedy, at which she is expert and deft. There are so few clever light comediennes in Hollywood that Hilda's services are eagerly sought.

Hilda is a brunette and has the knack of putting her personality into her acting, to such a degree that she seems as a real living being on the screen, rather than a mere shadow.

Sooner or later, she'll be in American productions.

THIRD UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH DEDICATION

ON SUNDAY the formal dedication of the fine new church home of the Third United Presbyterian congregation on the East Side will take place.

This is an event that has been looked forward to for months by the members of this important East Side congregation, and one that means much to that great section of the city.

The church building is one that is a magnificent addition to the houses of worship in New Castle, and is one that is equipped in every way for carrying on the work for which it is intended. Indeed, it is a step in advance of most churches in the city in that it has been built with a view of placing strong emphasis on the Sabbath School work, the training ground for the church, in that there are provided in the church 42 separate rooms for Sabbath School classes.

The new building has been erected to meet the pressing demand of a fast growing congregation, the development having been especially rapid during the past few years under the pastorate of Rev. S. B. Copeland.

Certain it is that members of other churches of New Castle rejoice with the members of the Third United Presbyterian congregation in the dedication of their splendid new home on Sunday, and believe that it has opened the way for the advancement of the work of this organization in the fast growing East Side district, in a manner that can only be productive of good results.

Congratulations are due the Third United Presbyterians of New Castle.

WELL DONE, NEW CASTLE!

NOW that the epochal and record breaking convention of the State Sabbath School Association in this city has been concluded, it is fitting that New Castle should feel a bit exultant over the result.

Not only was it the greatest convention of the kind in the history of Pennsylvania or any other state, but it was so successfully handled by the people of New Castle and Lawrence county that it is in every way one that will always be memorable. We doubt not, but that it will be for many years pointed out as the aim and ambition of convention cities to equal or exceed the "convention in New Castle."

Percy L. Craig, state president, and every person in the state or local Sabbath School organizations, as well as all others who had any share in the planning or program of this great convention can feel elated today in the satisfaction of knowing that they took part in the successful completion of an immense task.

It would be difficult to specifically mention half of the persons or organizations sharing in this wonderful success, but every person who in any way was connected with the undertaking is deserving of the plaudits not only of those directly affected at the convention, but of the city of New Castle at large for the credit reflected on their home city in that effort.

Well done, New Castle!

TOO MANY HOME RUNS

BASEBALL fans are complaining that too many home runs are being hit in the big leagues. There is a wide demand for the adoption of a less lively ball.

One unacquainted with the psychology of man would ridicule the thought that there would ever come a time when a baseball fan would cease to get a thrill out of a circuit clout and yet that very thing occurred almost daily during the season just ended. Major league players hit so many home runs this year that the bleacherites are convinced a livelier ball is in use.

A thing ceases to be thrilling when it is repeated too frequently and home runs were quite as commonplace this year as singles. Every team in the two major leagues had contenders for the crown of the "king of swat" and considerable space was required in the sporting pages of the newspaper for recording the numerous home runs made every afternoon.

That which every body can do is no achievement. It was once considered a feat to hit the ball over the fence or into the left field bleachers because it was something few could do. Nobody would play solitaire if everybody always won. Lovers of baseball would soon tire of their favorite game if their team never lost a game. It is the uncertainty and the suspense of the game which make it the red-blooded, exciting contest it is.

It may be that baseball is developing better players. Such things have happened before and now seem natural. If the sport is producing better players and harder hitters, then perhaps it would be wise for the good of the game to make the baseball less lively.

Hints and Dints

Sun sets tonight 5:21. Sun rises tomorrow 6:12.

President Craig's home city was well pleased with his wonderful Sunday school convention. It was a good thing for New Castle.

Lift is short except to the fellow who is serving a life sentence.

New Wilmington is putting on metropolitan airs. A community chest fund is contemplated. They will find out how many tightwads they have and what streets they live on by that method.

The first big convention held in New Castle was a good one. Hundreds of people were entertained and left our city singing its praises. That is the stuff that builds cities.

It's the people not engaged in making newspapers who know best how it should be done.

Our shattered headgear is off to Lee Callahan and his troops of Boy Scouts. We do not need to fear for the future of our great country as long as we have boys like the ones who served at the Sabbath school convention. We know all the rest of the scouts are also fine chaps and ready to serve when needed. The boys helped a lot as did also their leader Mr. Callahan.

"Pardon me for contradicting you" generally means "What a damphool you are. How do you get that such?"

Don't forget Mr. Berquist's Mission when you are asked to contribute for it's support for the coming year tomorrow. It is doing a great work and deserves the support of those interested in the other fellow who is less fortunate. Do as well as you did last year and better if you can. We are not asking you to do anything that we do not do ourselves.

Personally we got a world of good out of the Sabbath school convention. It was our privilege to make the acquaintance of a lot of good, clever folks and it will be a great joy to meet them in the years to come.

The poor man does not have to live in dread of doing something that might hurt business.

It is said that there are more fat people in the world than there are thin ones. We find that to be true as far as travels go insofar as we have been able to make comparisons. And by the way there are some mighty good looking fat people.

America spends more money on a man before they hang him, than it does on a man it has decided to let live.

Next week will also be a great week for New Castle. Many hundreds of Masons from all over Western Pennsylvania will be here for three days attending the fall reunion of the Consistory. Many outstanding men will be here as visitors and it really will be another convention week for us.

Two Pittsburgh men have their brains insured for six million dollars. They made their own appraisals.

The News sent thousands of copies out of the city during the past week to people who will be interested in the Sabbath school convention proceedings. This was accomplished at a loss, but it has its compensations in the fact that the newspapers will advertise New Castle when it reaches most every city and hamlet in the state. Nothing beats favorable advertising.

A big convention brings all kinds of people together and all who attend them get a better view of life by associating with the other fellow.

Good-bye Sunday Schoolers, come back again some time. We will always be glad to see you.

A man who is thought to have passed bum checks in every city in this country has been arrested in Butler. We are always sorry to hear of the arrest of men who pass phoney checks because it is too bad that the suckers who they bleed so easily cannot get skinned oftener. We have no sympathy for any human who takes a check from a person he does not know.

We noticed a woman at a candy stand looking over the stock and she finally said to the clerk in charge, "If you do not mind I will pick out the candy I want with my own hands as I am going to eat it myself." All the clerks in the vicinity came near fainting when they heard it.

No matter to us if over half the people in America make successful flights across the ocean in airplanes we will either stay at home or go in the kind of carriers in existence at this time—and that's that.

Less than twenty five per cent of men with the title Ph. D. are producers according to the American Historical Association. According to that there must be a lot of loafers holding the title.

A Letter From an Authority.

Some days ago we had a visit from the Hon. Walter Savory, one of the best authorities on newspapers and their manufacture in the world. He is assistant to the vice president of the Mergenthaler Linotype company in New York and a personal friend of the writer and was also of the late David Jameson of this city. He writes us as follows:

New York, Oct. 11, 1927.
Mr. Fred L. Rentz, The News,
New Castle, Pa.

Dear Fred:—I cannot resist the inclination to drop you a line, expressing not only my delight but my surprise during my recent visit to your office.

You have a perfect gem in your newspaper home (as well as in your domestic home), and by this I mean to include not only beauty, but mechanical equipment arrangement, comfort for employes, light, convenience and general ensemble, topped off with wonderful pictures in your office of the history of printing.

My visit was a genuine pleasure, you may be sure. With regards,

Yours sincerely,
WALTER H. SAVORY.

TODAY'S STORYETTE

William was not a favorite with his rich uncle. In vain did he try to impress him, but the old man was not impressed.

One evening the young man called at his uncle's house ostensibly to ask after the old gentleman's health. In the course of the conversation he asked:

"Uncle, don't you think it would be rather foolish for me to marry a girl who is intellectually my inferior?"

"Worse than foolish, Thomas, my lad," was the reply—"worse than foolish—impossible."

Report from across the way is that there were more deaths than births in Vienna last year. But Vienna is a good deal like New York and Chicago, so many people go there to die that little discrepancies like this do not bother them.

A barber in Ellwood, Indiana, refuses to bob the hair of women declaring that a revelation from God has shown him that it is wrong. The other bobbers in town are not a bit sore at this Christian barber and their business hasn't been hurt either.

The frost may not have been on the pumpkin very strong yet, but we have had some good pumpkin pie just the same. Just as good as if the frost has bitten the big yellow animals or whatever you call them.

Held for murder in Chicago a bandit proved that at the time of the killing he was out robbing a man in another part of the city. It seems in this case that it paid to keep books on the time of the robberies.

A chicken raiser of England says that sun-stroke causes hen to lay two eggs at time four days each week for year and that on two occasions three eggs at a time. Now all the hens of that community are getting sun-baths in the hope of getting sunstroke to help their laying.

Rubber "stop" signs are being used at through streets in Chicago. The good of these is that when they are knocked down by motorists who refuse to stop they bob up again where they ought to be.

It isn't a bit too early to do your Christmas shopping early. And it won't be long now until that is the real slogan people are interested in.

If you think a convention like the Sabbath school workers doesn't help a town ask the store keepers. We made it our business to ask the provision dealers and several of them told us it was the biggest week they have ever had. The department store men also gave testimony that for the two days the rain didn't fall they had a fine increase in business from the visitors in the city. Many of those who come to a city such as this do so with the intentions of buying and in that way the city is directly benefitted.

France now thinks that the American tariff is all right because she wants to borrow a few million dollars. Of course France is all right as a nation, but she shouldn't ask forgiveness of debts, she should pay everything charged to her and be thankful she has so generous a nation to deal with.

The net earnings of the Pullman company for August of this year are reported to have been $1,503,618. That doesn't look as though the railroads are suffering much from the automobile traffic, does it?

There seems to be reason to believe that Tex Rickard is the man who should capitalize a fight between the wets and the drys. It should be a money maker.

A trade note indicates that the sale of corsets in increasing. This would indicate that the corset's stay is longer than some people give credit for.

Was there ever a deader political issue than the third-term fomentation? We have failed to see it.

Ruth Elder, courageous young Florida girl, is safe on a ship that picked her out of the ocean.

Ruth's mother, who prayed constantly while her daughter was flying and put the family Bible in the airship, weeps for joy. Other mothers are weeping with her.

The nation will hope that Ruth Elder and other girls will stay on the ground hereafter, or do their flying over land, and let men like Linbbergh, if there are any like him, do the ocean flying.

Columbus's job was for a man, and so is the job of ocean flying.

Those Mongolians and Tartars of whom Genghis Khan and Attila made conquering armies, are no longer dangerous to the civilized races, that can easily dispose of them with poison gases and bombs from the air, as long as they ride to war on shaggy ponies.

But what if the airplane spreads through the world as Ford's car has spread, and Mongols and Tartars come traveling through the clouds? On that day prosperous Americans in their counting rooms will shiver, with good reason, as the soft mandarin shivers now in Peking. Dollars won't protect them.

Professor Collins of Smithsonian Institution says Eskimos leave their wives for five months, each year, to make a good catch of seals certain.

At the end of the five months the bladders of all seals captured during the year are thrown into the water to please the seal tribe.

Separating from women for a part of each year is often the rule in many savage tribes. Many Red Indians paid little attention to their wives except in spring. This gave the squaws the rest of the year to look after the children and was probably a relief.

If the plan were tried in this country, making the "husband's absence" eleven months, instead of five, the number of divorces might diminish. Dull minds are easily bored.

King Albert of Belgium, estimable gentleman, but, in the saying of the French, one who "did not invent gunpowder," exclaimed "only a girl" when he heard that his grandchild wasn't a boy.

He wouldn't have said, "only a girl" had he known some of the real queens—Elizabeth, Marie, Theresa, Semiramis and especially, that African queen, Tomyris, whose son was killed by King Cyrus, when the son foolishly got drunk on wines that Cyrus left as a trap.

Tomyris, who had warned Cyrus not to hurt her son, caught the great king, chopped off his head, put it in a goat skin full of human blood, saying, "now drink all you like." "Only a girl," does not describe her, or Bertha, mother of Charlemagne, Nancy Hanks mother of Lincoln, Letita Ramolino, the broad-hipped mother of Napoleon of Olympias who made Alexander the Great. Which is your favorite mother in history?

The breaking point comes at different places in different individals.

Othello choked his lady because he was suspicious. She had done nothing. The Da Pimini hunchback murdered his brother and his wife because they made eyes at each other.

Things like that would not disturb Frank Cocht of Chicago. When she put poison in his wine, he only remonstrated with his wife, gently. When she tried to choke him he locked himself in his room and waited patiently. But when she killed his 30 canary birds, he sued for divorce.

Dr. Crane's Editorial

SAFETY

Safety is one of the things that experience and old age are always preaching. And it is one of the things of which youth is most impatient. There is one job that I know of in which safety is a recommendation, and that is the banker's. Elsewhere we like a man that is willing to take a chance. Still for a bishop or a king or a president or anybody like that, safety is the most outstanding qualification.

As I have pointed out before, however, the one position open for the hard-faced and hard-hearted man is a banker's. We don't want a good fellow or a good mixer to handle our funds.

At a recent meeting at Winona Lake, in Indiana, speakers declared that almost all of the drinking of liquor that has been talked about in colleges was not due to an appetite for strong drink, but to the appetite for adventure. Boys like to do what their elders tell them not to do. They want new experiences. Youth loves to take a chance, even when that chance involves possible disease or death.

The armies of all countries are made up of youth. War is the outstanding great adventure. There is a possibility of being killed, of course, but the thrill seems to be worth it in the minds of youth.

That is the reason that the citizenry of a country will rally in an army, but come forward like molasses in winter when there is a call for them to support the falling franc or the debilitated dollar. There is a lot more thrill in risking one's life than in risking one's money.

So long as there are laws there will be "fun" in breaking them. There will not be found wanting people who are willing to take a chance.

The element of the boy is in us all and Huck Finn will always be more popular than little Lord Fauntleroy.

The newspaper writers are ever anxious to poke fun at the man who plays safe and to glorify the man who runs risks.

People will always love to jump off moving trains, to make balloon ascensions, to speed up automobiles and to drink whiskey, for the reason that these things are dangerous.

When Nietsche said we should live dangerously and build our house on the side of a volcano, he struck a very responsive chord in the heart of the average man, particularly the youth.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

VEGETABLES AND CIVILIZATION.

The Human race has always eaten meat. When did it commence to eat vegetables? No doubt our first ancestors ate what Nature provided other than meat, by the consumption of nuts and berries, which grew without cultivation by the Human, but when did the Human Race begin to cultivate the fruits of the ground? This question has been answered by a naturalist who has been investigating and he says as follows:

Lettuce is one of the oldest vegetables known, and was eaten fully 500 years before the Christian Era. Aristotle praised it highly. Spinach was introduced into China from Persia about 100 B. C., but was new to Europe in the sixteenth century. Botanically, one of the most interesting products of the garden is the cabbage family. Kale, brussels, sprouts, savoy cabbage, red cabbage, collards, kohlrabi, cauliflower and broccoli are all varieties of one species. Carrots were eaten by the ancients, but they were not very popular.

Watercress, growing naturally in all north temperate regions, has been eaten as a salad since the Greek and Roman ascendancy, and has been cultivated since the sixteenth century. Peas were used by ancient Egyptians and others, but were not common food in Europe until the eighteenth century. It is believed they were grown in the earliest American settlements. Thomas Jefferson recorded the growing of tomatoes in Virginia in 1781, yet it is said that an Italian could not persuade the people of Salem, Mass., to taste them in 1802.

There are people living in New Castle today who remember the time when tomatoes were looked upon askance. They were thought to be poisonous, and were at first used to decorate the home mantel piece until it became necessary to throw them into the garbage pile.

Just Folks

By EDGAR A. GUEST

WAGES

Wages are bonnets and dresses and frocks,
Roses and pansies and poppies and phlox,
Now and then trips
On steam cars and ships,
Cookies and cakes which a fond mother cooks,
Payments on houses and music and books.

Wages are ribbons for little girl's hair,
Sandals and slippers for children to wear,
Gas for the car,
An evening cigar,
Theater tickets and sugar and tea,
Tnd every known need of a small family.

Wages are carpets and curtains and chairs,
Baseballs and trumpets and stuffed woolly bears,
Lollypops sweet,
Potatoes and meat,
Violin lessons and coals for the fire.
And every small trinket which mortals require.

Counted in money man's wages seem small,
One little envelope carries it all,
But bulked into toys
For girls and for boys,
Garden seeds, ribbons and something for thrift,
Wages are more than one toiler could lift.

Bible Thought For Today

A CLEAR TESTIMONY:—Let the redeemed of the Lord say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy: And gathered them out of the lands, from the east, and from the west, from the north, and from the south. Psalm 107:2, 3.

PRAYER: My soul shall make her boast in the Lord: the humble shall hear thereof and be glad.

C. B. D. CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

RECORD-HOLDERS

Can anyone tell me the name of the bright young man who holds the record for sitting on top of flagpoles?

Not that it matters. If anyone should tell me the name, I would try to forget it at once, since I try to keep nonsensical data out of my mind as much as possible, so that there may be some room there for something important.

I just wonder whether any sane adult, outside of the immediate family of the hero, ever remembers the name of a person who makes or wins a record for doing obviously trivial and useless things.

For instance, who were the male and female marathon fox-trot champions who held the spotlight of folly a few brief springs ago? What are those two remarkable individuals doing now, and have they managed to adapt themselves to the regular course of life, after a brief spurt of silly posing for the news photographers?

* * *

When I was a very young man, my home town, Wichita, Kansas, went wild over marathon piano players. I believe marathon was not used in describing these artists at that time, however. They were called long-distance pianists.

Somehow, I have forgotten the names of all of them. But world records were broken again and again in Wichita, and the town actually thought for a seaon that it was gaining immortal fame through the establishment of these records within its boundaries.

The aspirant for immortality was sometimes a blacksmith, and sometimes a music salesman or piano tuner. He generally sat in the window of a music store on Main street or Douglas avenue, and started playing the piano gently. Night and day he kept it up, without once missing a note. He played no great concerto, but satisfied his esthetic self with the "Blue Danube" or "Old Kentucky Home."

Gradually, the poor fellow played until he dropped off the stool, unconscious. Once they had a great free-for-all contest in a skating rink, and nine of them played until they dropped. The survivor was declared world champion.

* * *

Wichita should be excused. That was long ago, and the town really had little enough to go crazy about then, so any sort of bedlam was welcomed for relief from ennui.

But that millions of adult Americans should be interested in flagpole sitters, marathon dancers, hog-callers, pie-eaters, bladder-blowers and night-and-day auto drivers, is beyond my understanding.

Bell Company Firm Believer In Advertising

President Says Newspaper Advertising Greatest Agency

L. H. KINNARD
President

That the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania is a firm believer in newspaper advertising was brought out in an interview with Leonard H. Kinnard, president of the organization. It is through the advertising columns of the local papers, he asserted, that the general public is made acquainted with the remarkable and rapid advances in the telephonic art.

"We are now living in a new era of telephone communication," Mr. Kinnard said. "Things undreamed of by most people a decade ago are today a part of the telephone service that is available to every one in this nation. A more convenient, a faster, a more dependable service, a service which reaches to almost the entire English-speaking world awaits all who merely lift the receivers from their telephones and make their desires known. If it were not for the fact that the Telephone company advertised these remarkable innovations and developments in the newspapers, the public would never realize the tremendous changes that are taking place."

Although the average telephone user sees little of the intricate telephone system except the instrument itself and the pole lines that stretch along the highways, Mr. Kinnard pointed out, they are very much interested in the organization and the mechanism that makes the service possible. So many things are going on at the same time in so many places and so many elements enter into the work, he said, that it would be impossible for the public to actually learn what was happening if the accomplishments were not summarized and announced through advertisements.

Next Convention Of State Library Association Goes To Uniontown

Despite the efforts of Alice M. Sterling, librarian of the New Castle Public Library and Clarence Patterson, member of the legislative board of the Pennsylvania Library Association, the convention of 1928 which was sought for New Castle will be held in Uniontown, according to word received from Miss Sterling at noon today.

The reason given as to why the convention will be held in Uniontown next year is that it will help the city to get a library.

Eleanore Carver of Sharon, was elected president of the Pennsylvania Library Association at the convention which was held in Harrisburg Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. Other officers elected are: Vice President, Susan Hummelwright of Woodlawn; secretary, Robert P. Bliss of Harrisburg, and treasurer, Alice Willigerod of Hazleton.

Program Of Week

Included among the post-dedicatory events that will feature the special two weeks services of the dedication of the new Third United Presbyterian church, will be Citizen's Night which will be held on Tuesday evening at 7:30.

Representatives from the Ministerial Association, City schools, Presbytery, City Council, the Press, the State and the Law will be present and make addresses.

Dr. H. C. Weaver, pastor of the First M. E. church will speak for the Ministerial Association; Dr. C. C. Green, the Schools; Dr. S. E. Irvine, Beaver Valley Presbytery; W. T. Burns, City council; Fred L. Rentz, the press; Senator George T. Weingartner, the state; and Judge James H. Chambers, the law.

On Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock there will be a congregational dinner given in the large banquet hall. S. H. Johnson will be in charge of the dinner arrangements. The affair is in the nature of a get-together in the new church. Following the dinner an interesting program of music and speeches will be carried out.

Organ Recital

The event which will possibly eclipse all others of the two weeks services will be the organ recital which will be given Monday evening October 17, at 8 o'clock, by John A. Bell, organist of the First Presbyterian church of Pittsburgh.

Mr. Bell is an artist of ability and will bring out the very best that is in the beautiful organ. He will be assisted by Will Rhodes who has a delightful tenor voice and Miss Margaret Spaulding, soprano. Both Mr. Rhodes and Miss Spaulding are members of the choir of the First Presbyterian church of Pittsburgh.

All of the three artists come to this city with the highest recommendations and will present a program of an unusually high standard which will be a rare treat to all music lovers of the city.

Church Well Adapted

The new church is one of the most beautiful church buildings in this section of the country. It is built or red tapestry brick, trimmed with gray stone. The auditorium floor will seat nearly 700, and the gallery about 300. The three large windows of the auditorium, in beautiful stone tracery consist of beautiful antique glass. These windows portray, "The Empty Tomb," "The Garden of Gethsemane," and, "The Good Shepherd."

The pews, pulpit furniture, choir furniture, and wood-work are of medium oak finish and harmonize in color and design.

A vested chorus choir of forty voices is assisted in the music by a beautiful Four Manual Organ, with harp, flute, chimes, and echo attachments. David West is the Choir Director, and Mrs. Francis Eakin is the organist. (It contains over 2000 pipes, and sixty-eight stops, including couplers.)

REV. S. B. COPELAND
Present Pastor

Back of the auditorium and on the same floor are the pastor's study and the Church Secretary's office, the choir room, the sessions' room, and the Women's Bible Class room, also the Primary, Beginners', and Junior Departments of the Sabbath School. In the second floor of the Bible School Department are to be found the Intermediate Department and Young People's Division of the Bible School, also a large class room for the Young Ladies' Bible Class, the S. S. secretary's office, the ladies' parlor and kitchenette.

In the room under the auditorium there is a large banquet hall with a seating capacity of about 600, in which is a stage for the speakers and singers. A splendidly equipped kitchen is to be found off the dining hall with a large stove, an electric dish washer, steam tables, coffee percolators and everything that goes to make a modern kitchen. On this floor are also to be found a large Bible Class Room for the men, together with other adult class rooms. The building is complete in every detail, and contains 42 separate Bible Class Rooms with doors in which perfect privacy is to be had.

The building is certainly a great credit to the community, and the building committee is deserving of special praise in the work which they have so successfully completed. Dr. R. M. Eagleson is Chairman, G. H. Colnot, Secretary, Chas. Wasson, D. A. Palmer, H. J. Sines.

This congregation is only 27 years old, organized with a membership of sixteen. Rev. T. L. Rose became the first pastor and remained until called by death in 1905. His brother-in-law, Rev. J. Elmer Campbell, accepted a call, and for 15 years was pastor in this field. In 1921, Rev. S. B. Copeland became pastor of this congregation. The congregation has had but three pastors and under each pastor a church building has been erected. Under the first pastor, the people erected a chapel which became Sabbath School equipment for the old building. In the pastorate of Rev. J. Elmer Campbell, the auditorium of the old church was erected. The last few years the congregation has grown with such rapidity that it became necessary to erect another building. The Bible School membership is over 900 and the church membership over 800.

The present board of trustees includes: Ira Alford, C. Caruthers, Dr. R. M. Eagleson, G. E. Miles, D. A. Palmer, Floyd Book. Present Session, J. E. Blevins, W. H. Boyd, J. S. Caruthers, W. M. Carpenter, J. A. Cox, W. E. Ferry, W. S. Gibson, A. E. Langlands, S. H. Johnson, J. H. Kocher, A. J. Minick, J. R. A. Pattison, N. H. Ramsey, John Ulrich, H. A. Thornburg.

Mr. J. L. Beatty, Pittsburgh, Pa., was the architect for the building, and A. Wishart & Son, Sharon, Pa., were the builders. The completed building, fully equipped, will cost about $165,000.00.

Calles Declares Mexican Revolt Has Collapsed

President Calles Issues Statement Today In Regard To Rebellion

(International News Service)

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 15.—"The situation is calm and the rebellion has collapsed."

President Calles made this statement to the International News Service today, when asked for comment on dispatches appearing in the American papers indicating that the Mexican revolution has not been entirely quelled.

The president stated to the International News Services that the true condition of affairs in Mexico has been pictured by Mexico City dispatches and that dispatches from other sources are not true.

Gen. Arnulfo Gomez, presidential candidate and one of the leaders of the latest uprising, has only 35 followers with him, according to news received here from Vera Cruz. Gomez is said to be in the mountains of the State of Vera Cruz, with the pursuing federals close at hand. It is believed here that Gen. Escobar's federals have Gomez hemmed in so closely that he cannot escape and that his only alternative are death or capture. Capture would result in immediate court martial.

Less than 30 federals were killed in last Sunday's battle which broke the back of the Gomez-Almada revolt.

Bellows Resigns Position On New Radio Commission

Samuel Pickard Of Kansas Selected To Fill Vacancy On Radio Board

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Henry A. Bellows, former announcer and director of station WIIC at Minneapolis, resigned from the Federal Radio commission today, effective November 1, and the White House announced the appointment on Sam Pickard, of Manhattan, Kansas, as his successor.

Bellows, who will return to WIIC, stated that financial reasons prompted his retirement.

Pickard at present is secretary of the commission. Formerly he was chief of the Radio Division of the Department of Agriculture, having been brought to Washington by Secretary Jardine. He is a radio pioneer, being credited with first conceiving educational programs for the farmers of the middle west. During the war he served in aviation and was wounded in action. He is 34 and a democrat.

Dinner Is Planned For Employed Boys

A dinner is being planned for the employes boys classes at the Y. M. C. A. As yet, a definite time has not been set, and boys interested are requested by John C. Leonard, secretary of the boys department, to watch for the date.

There will be a banquet, speeches, and a program arranged.

Will Close Dining Room Till Monday

There will be no meals served at The Castleton over the week end was the statement made this morning by Manager John L. Slack.

We are doing this, continued Manager Slack, because there are still a few things that we wish to finish before we throw the house open to the public, and we are making this announcement so that the people of New Castle will not be disappointed Sunday. The next meals that will be served at The Castleton will be on Monday evening.

This includes the coffee shop, also.

MAIL ORDERS NOW BEING ACCEPTED FOR "QUEEN HIGH"

The mail order sale for "Queen High" musical comedy sensation which comes to the Scottish Rite Auditorium, New Castle, Tuesday, October 25, opened actively today. The box office has already a large number of orders, which will be opened first and accorded the preferential choice of seats. Inasmuch as the regular advance sales does not open until Tuesday, October 18, the theatre going public generally may realize that the demand for the forthcoming one night engagement will be phenomenally heavy and consequently it will be expedient on their part to get mail orders into the theatre without delay. We get the same "Queen High" organization that broke all records for attendance and business in Boston and Philadelphia.

The large company is headed by such well known favorites as Eddie Garvie and Dave Mallen who have comedy roles that win a thousand peals of laughter at every performance. The other principals are Margaret Lee, Neil Collins, Carrie Glenn, Mary Maryln, Georgette Armfield, Albert Downing, Danny O'Donnell, Arlyne White and Dorothea Dunn. There is a large chorus of singing and dancing beauties from the Ambassador Theatre, New York.

The Curse Of Covetousness
A Chat With Sunday School Pupils

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL.

When God said "Thou shalt not covet" he meant thereby to guard us against a whole brood of such sins as jealousy, theft, perjury and murder into which King Ahab fell when he looked with covetous eyes upon the vineyard of Naboth, his next door neighbor. His covetous heart stifled all the joy he might have had out of all the riches of the ivory palace he owned because it hankered after what his neighbor owned.

Thus to this day happiness consists not in the abundance of the things that we possess, but in the spirit of contentment with which we look upon our possessions and those of others about us. How unlike a king Ahab was, lying there upon his couch pouting like a spoiled child because Naboth's sentiment would not permit him to sell to the king the place his fathers through many generations had called home.

Ahab is the picture of contentmptable weakness and wickedness combined while Jezebel his wife is the personification of strength prostituted to wickedness as she shames the king with his weakness and sets her iron will to work through perjury and murder to bring about Naboth's death that the king may have the coveted vineyard for his garden. She accomplishes her purpose, or thinks she does and proudly announces the success of her scheme and the king arises and goes to view his ill-gotten possession.

Jezebel's policy might be expressed in that popular saying, "It's not what you do but what you get away with." But popular as that policy is now and has been in all ages, there is a law of God that antedates and takes precedence over it.That law is expressed in the golden text of this lesson: "Be sure your sin will find you out.' It is otherwise expressed in the words "The wages of sin is death" and "The way of the transgressor is hard.' Those who defy these ancient laws have yet to learn that "sorrow tracketh wrong as echo follows song—on, on, on." It took 20 years for the guilt of Ahab and Jezebel to ripen into judgment but it came about exactly as Elijah foretold it that day he confronted the king in the vineyard he never enjoyed after he got it. "In the place were dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine." Ahab thought he was "getting away with" his sin, but just then Elijah blocked the way and rebuked him, "Hast thou found me, O mine enemy?" Thus his guilty conscience made him cry out. And Elijah flashed back the reply, "I have found thee; because thou has sold thyself to work evil in the sight of the Lord."

Ahab thought he was getting a bargain—a vineyard as a present. But the price he paid was his kingdom and his own soul and the souls of his children after him. He had literally sold himself for a parcel of ground. And what a fool's bargain it was he made. But others are doing the same thing today and need to ponder the Lord Jesus Christ's question, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Ahab paid too high a price for Naboth's vineyard when he "sold himself" for it. It was a fool's bargain, yet a bargain many so-called "hard headed business men" are driving every day.

(The International Uniform Lesson for Sunday October 16 is I Kings chapter 21, the subject being "Elijah in Naboth's Vineyard," and the Golden Text Numbers 32:23 "Be sure your sin will find you out.")

The Daybook OF A New Yorker
BY BURTON RASCOE

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to New Castle News.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The evanescence of fame on Broadway was plainly shown the other night when George M. Cohan opened in a new musical play—a play in which he appeared personally for the first time in a long, long while. Not one dramatic critic in New York attended the opening. They all went to Katharine Cornell's premiere in Somerset Maugham's melodrama, "The Letter".

The Cohan opening was "covered" by the second and third string dramatic reviewers, those nearly anonymous scribes recruited from the real estate or financial departments of the newspapers, the city editor's staff, or elsewhere, who timidly give authority to their pronouncements by hesitant initials at the end of their critiques. On principle the dramatic critics do not go to second nights, except on those rare occasions when two openings of equal importance in novelty occur on the same night. So if the dramatic critics ever see the Yankee Kid now grown into the Grand Old Man of Broadway it will be by accident.

The old man dances but twice in his new musical show, and then only for brief moments. But those brief moments are worth going to the show to see. He is still the Greatest Buck Dancer of Them All. The hoofers in his show are plentiful and experienced; but Cohan makes them all seem stiff and awkward by his grace and rhythm and coordination.

* * *

The opening of "The Letter," Miss Cornell's new starring vehicle, was next to the Follies opening the most brilliant of the season's first nights. The importance of an opening may be gauged by a first glance by the number of top hats on the way into the theater. (The top hats this season, by the way, are of the opera variety, those collapsible, dull black, funeral looking lids). Next the importance can be judged by the size of the crowd of people who are not attending the show but are hovering around the front of the theater to get a glimpse of the celebrities. Lastly the importance of the show can be judged by whether or not the dramatic critics, Percy Hammond, George Jean Nathan and Kelcy Allen, put on their black suits for it. If they do, it is one of the openings.

Nathan, by the way, was with Lillian Gish. The audience had been requested to be in the seats by 8:30. The curtain was to rise promptly at that time, and patrons were warned that no one would be seated during that scene. The curtain actually arose at ten minutes of nine, and fat women in ermine wraps were climbing over me and shutting off my view while all the shooting was going on. But what I started to say was that most of the dramatic critics were in their seats a full ten minutes before the curtain was due to rise. Miss Gish wore a plainly tailored little black dress and a rather wide brimmed plain black hat whose brim came closely about her face. Apparently Nathan explained to Miss Gish that immediately upon the rise of the curtain Miss Cornell was to be seen murdering a man, firing five bullets into his body, and apparently also this was too much for Miss Gish's nerves. They disappeared to the lounge until the brief opening scene was over.

Interest Holds In Great Convention To Last Session

World Sabbath School Delegates Meet In Banquet

Hundred And Forty Attend Closing Banquet Of Convention

One hundred and forty world Sabbath school convention delegates were present at the World Pilgrims' dinner held last evening in the dining room of the Scottish Rite cathedral, in connection with the 65th annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School association.

Seventy of those present had attended a world's pilgrimage, and the other 70 signified that they would go to the next one which will be held in Los Angeles in the summer of 1928.

H. C. Heckerman, vice president of the state association, was toastmaster, and by an unanimous vote, was re-elected to the presidency of the World Pilgrims association for the coming year.

No set speeches marked this dinner. The evening was spent in fun and fun they did have. Walter E. Meyers, general secretary of the state association, who is quite bald, was presented, at the conclusion of the banquet, with a flaming red comb. Another divine received a pair of red socks, trimmed in white.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy L. Craig were the guests of honor, and Mrs. Craig was presented with a five-pound box of candy in behalf of her work with the World Pilgrims.

At the conclusion of the dinner, the pilgrims rose and bowed in silent prayer to the memory of George Penneman of Pittsburgh, who had died since the last meeting of the organization.

RESUSCITATION METHODS WILL BE PRESENTED

Monday, October 17, 1927, at 11 o'clock the Penn theatre of New Castle will present an educational picture on "Resuscitation" free of charge for the benefit of the city firemen, police department, doctors, nurses, professional men and the public at large.

This film shows the workings of the human heart and lungs, their purpose and why we breathe. It also shows "resuscitation" from being gased, electric shock and drowning.

It may be tomorrow that you may be called upon to save a life. Be prepared. See "Resuscitation."

Children's Division Closing Conference

In the closing conference of the children's division of the state Sabbath school convention held Friday afternoon, Miss Elizabeth Harris, former superintendent of the children's division of New York state, made her plea for all the teachers of children to conduct their work in such a way that it will contribute to the life of the children.

The conference was presided over by the Hon. Charles Steele of Northumberland.

The closing address was made by Miss Elsie G. Rodgers, who for several years has been supuerintendent of the children's division of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association.

The departmental conferences were conducted by the same people who have conducted them during the other days of the conventinon, Mrs. F. W. Tomlinson of the Baptist Publication society, Philadelphia, spoke to the beginners department teachers concerning "The Child's Response." Miss Harris in the primary department spoke of "Types of Material" in the work of "The Primary Child and World Friendship." Mrs. Margaret String in the junior department spoke of "Expression in Activity."

Miss Harris in her address on "Needed Adjustments in the Present Program and Methods" mentioned the making of the worship service rich and to touch the life of the children more vitally, more elastic but more carefully planned, not the same form week after week, month after month and year after year.

In the prayers, have the children think out little original prayers and read or learn them. Give them a chance to say what they want to say rather than to say what they think we want them to say, said Miss Harris.

Dated quarterlies are too binding for real good work, said Miss Harris. One must plan their own program, although others may help in outlining the program. But the material used with one group must be entirely different from that used with other groups.

Dr. S. S. Hough Speaks At Missionary Conference Of State Convention

SESSION IS HELD IN FIRST U. P. CHURCH

"Life complete comes through stewardship" stated Dr. S. S. Hough before the missionary conference of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School association held yesterday afternoon in the First United Presbyterian church.

"We must believe that He is," Dr. Hough continued. "And then we must believe that we are as much 'sent' as was the Christ.

"The problem of the church is to make its constituents function as Christians. Christ needs us for service just as we need Him for life. He lives now and in His presence we live, breathe and die. That is stewardship.

"God gives us 95 per cent of everything that we get" he continued. "It is our business to line up with God and do all that we can to destroy the self indulgence and avarice of this crass, materialistic world.

"Stewardship covers the whole of life, but it centers on Christianity," he concluded.

After the address by Dr. Hough, Mrs. Quincy Holsopple of Philadelphia gave an interesting talk on correlating the missions with the general problems of the church school in which she gave the assembled missionary workers many new ideas.

Following the talk of Mrs. Quincy, Mrs. A. B. VanOrmer of Huntingdon, Pa., addressed the crowd on the methods and materials for missions.

Devotionals were conducted by E. J. Berquist of the City Mission, New Castle at the beginning and the close of the meeting.

Several Wrecks Due To Extremely Foggy Condition

Rebuilt Library Has 10,000 Volumes

(Special To The News)

NEW WILMINGTON, Oct. 15. — In an interview today, Miss M. A. Allman, director of the Westminster library, stated that the number of volumes now in the possession of the library numbered 10,000. Of these 3,000 have already been listed and 1,500 classified.

While the library is rapidly increasing in size there is not enough room in the present quarters for all the books so that many of these are, for the present, being stored outside the library.

Miss Ailman also said that a number of periodicals are now being bound to replace those lost in the burning of "Old Main" last January.

THREE BOYS DIE IN AUTO CRASH

(International News Service)

ALTOONA, Oct. 15.—An attempt to race a train, and pass a crossing ahead of the engine was blamed today for the death of three youths at Howard during the night. Two of the young men were killed almost instantly. They were Leo Welch, 17, Paul Diehlan, 16, and Cecil Smith, driver of the car. Smith died in the hospital at Bellefonte.

Teaching Methods Are Discussed In Conference Sessions

Week Day Instruction In Religious Matters Considered At Convention

Week day religious instruction and methods of teaching occupied the time of the three conferences held in the Cathedral Friday afternoon. For the conferences the auditorium, the east lodge room and the gallery center room were utilized.

In the auditorium Dr. Frank M. McKibben and Hon. Claude T. Reno were the speakers, each of them taking phases of week day religious instruction. An open forum discussion completed the program.

Teaching Demonstration

In the Gallery Center room Temperance Teaching in three phases was demonstrated, the primary, the junior and the young people's work being the three. Dr. G. S. Lackland of Meadville, Pa., was the speaker.

"Better Attendance and Better Tests For Measuring Our Tasks," was the subject of two of the addresses in the East Lodge Room with Rev. Albert H. Gage and Dr. Charles Darsie as the speakers. Dr. J. Kirkwood Craig of Pittsburgh conducted a general problems conference.

Each of the conferences was well attended and from the amount of notes taken it was apparent that the thoughts projected in them would be taken back over the state for use in the next year.

CREDIT MEN TO MEET MONDAY

The October meeting of the New Castle Association of Credit Men will be held at the Elks club Monday evening, October 17, at 6:15 o'clock.

The association is to be honored by the presence of R. T. Graham of the Pittsburgh Dry Goods company of Pittsburgh, who is a director of the National Association of Credit Men, and L. I. MacQueen, who is the executive manager of the Credit Association of Western Pennsylvania. These men are both known to many New Castle business men and with their presence a good meeting is assured.

Tell Of Adult Division Work

Final Conference On Adult S. S. Work Attended By Throng

HOME DEPARTMENT STRESSED IN TALKS

"The home department is a large factor in building up the Bible school and is the spiritual life of the family where just one member of that family is a member," declared Mrs. E. K. Ross, home department superintendent of Bethlehem Presbyterian church of Philadelphia, at the concluding session of the adult division conference in her address, "Bigger Tasks for the Home Department."

"The home department was organized several years ago for the purpose of teaching the Sunday school lesson to aged people and shut-ins and others who had no special interest in Sunday school work." The speaker told of her own experience in her particular Bible school where she had an enrollment of over 1200 in her department. She told of the work extended to the aged people's homes and to tuberculosis sanitariums.

Mrs. Ross told of how she had gotten a number of her department to become members of the Bible school and who became among the active workers in the entire school.

Rev. Charles Darsie, D. D., of St. Louis, Mo., head of the adult division of the Church of Christ, was the next speaker and spoke on "Bigger Activities in Parent Training." Dr. Darsie gave a most inspiring address, emphasizing the need of a Christian home in which to raise children. Every family should reverence God in family worship and grace at every meal.

Dr. Darcie spoke of the wonderful influence that the telling of Bible stories has on children. They never forget stories of this character or hymns that are sung to them in their childhood.

The conference concluded with an address by Rev. A. H. Gage, D. D., who spoke on "Bigger Results Through the Adult Bible Class".

Rev. Gage stressed the effective work that can be accomplished in all branches of the church through the efforts of well organized adult Bible class.

The devotional hour was led by Rev. A. M. Stevenson, pastor of the Ellwood City Presbyterian church.

Week Day Religious Instruction Schools Discussed By Tuttle

Some 1,500 people had the unusual opportunity Friday afternoon at the session of the convention of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association in the Scottish Rite Cathedral to gain first-hand information concerning the successful operation of week-day religious instruction schools in the state of New York from the lips of one who is familiar with the conditions that brought about this situation.

The speaker was none other than the Hon. Charles H. Tuttle, United States attorney for lower New York, and counsel for the Greater New York Federation of Churches.

The chairman of the meeting was Frank H. Steen of Belle Vernon, a vice president of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association.

Mr. Tuttle had for his topic, "The Freethinkers Case", and his address was a discussion of the action brought in the several courts of New York state by The Freethinkers Society, in which an injunction was sought to cause the commissioner of education in New York state to take action preventing the board of education of White Plains from permitting the excusing of pupils from school to receive religious instruction.

The decisions of the several courts upheld the action of the board of education aid stirred the religious elements of New York state to the need of religious instruction.

Affects This State

The address of Mr. Tuttle was a clear, forceful explanation of what occurred and what may be done along those lines, not only in New York state, but in Pennsylvania and elsewhere, since it was only recently, he declared in the discussion that followed his address, that the attorney general of Pennsylvania took cognizance of this action and stated that it was a matter for consideration of the boards of education and for which they might prepare.

Mr. Tuttle said, among other things: "The decisions of the New York courts in the Freethinkers case open for parents an opportunity to have religion taught to their children by trained persons. These decisions present both an opportunity and a challenge to the churches. The Freethinkers Society by instituting the suit has unwittingly awakened the conscience of the community and of the churches to the need of a constructive and really adequate program for the training of youth in the spiritual interpretation of life.

"There were arrayed against such a decision a number of forces. First, there was the fact that the Freethinkers thought they would bring the matter before the public eye and into the public arena for their benefit. Then there was that public tradition of some 60 years' standing, that there should be no recognition of religion in the public school. This was in spite of the fact that the public school was in reality started by the churches. Tradition is that the schools must be strictly secular.

"Next there were those certain clauses in the American constitution that there is to be no established church and that man is entitled to freedom of belief. If the secular should combine religious training in its curriculum, then there would in reality be an established church and a denial of the privilege of religious liberty and freedom of thought.

"Then there was also arrayed against the White Plains idea certain clauses of the New York state constitution which are also embodied in those of all other states, that there shall be no discrimination in public affairs in the matter of religious belief and no use of public funds in the spreading of denominational tenents. Also that the school child must spend the entire time in the regulation school session.

"Arrayed in the interests of the decision we find the necessity of the state for a citizenship that is educated in the fundamentals of religion. Then there was also the necessity of the church to propagate its teachings and prevent the possible spread of irreligion that must result from a secular school system, with its tendency to control public opinion in channels other than those of a religious character.

"There was also the need of the public school system to escape the stigma of consecrating irreligion. Then there was also the court's attitude concerning the constitutional right of the parents to have a voice in the development of their own children, and lastly, the rights of the children themselves in their development.

"Thus we find in the decision of the United States supreme court against the Oregon compulsory school law, which sought to do away with all schools except those of a secular or public character, saying:

"'The child is not the mere creature of the state; those who nurture him and direct his destiny have the right, coupled with the high duty, to recognize and prepare him for additional obligations'. Religion and principals of good character can be taught, precisely as other branches of human knowledge and experience.

"The so-called 'White Plains' program which stood the test of courts and permits an opportunity of religious week-day instruction is very simple.

"The plan is to excuse from school attendance children between the ages of seven and 14 years, on the written request of the parent, one day each week, for the last half hour of the school session, which is a study period, so that they may attend church schools designated by the parents, and there receive religious instruction for the half hour and for an hour or so longer during the afternoon. The child so excused loses no school recitations and receives no credit for the work done in the church school. Those children who do not attend religious schools during this period are also free in the sense that they have no classes and use the half hour for study purposes.

"No public money is used to aid the church schools and the cards upon which the requests of the parents are recorded are not printed at public expense. The teachers of the public schools devote a slight amount of time to registering and checking excuses, but such use of public time is incidental to and legalized by the lawfulness of the excuse itself. The plan is governed by suitable regulations of the school authorities, but does not rest upon any legislative enactment.

"The decision in the case is the charter of liberty for religious education. It provides for the co-operation of the church and state and is an important factor when not carried beyond the point intended."

Mine Officials Start Preparing For Winter Siege

Estimate Thousand Families Will Be Turned From Homes By Company Orders

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 15.—Officials of the United Mine Workers of America are preparing for a long winter siege in their effort to restore the Jacksonville wage scale agreement, it was revealed here today.

Contracts for the construction of barracks to house a large number of striking coal miners are being drawn by counsel for the miners' union.

Approximately 1,100 union miners families will be turned out of their homes automatically, in the event of an adverse decision by the state superior court in the eviction suits now pending before it, and the union is making preparations to care for them, should the court uphold the operators' pleas.

It was estimated 500 families would be affected through a decision in the appeals filed by the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation. Another 500 cases have been appealed by the Vesta Coal Company, a subsidiary of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation. More than 100 cases have been carried to the high tribunal by the Consumers' Fuel Company, a subsidiary of the Wheeling Steel Company.

EPOCHAL STATE SABBATH SCHOOL CONVENTION ENDS

tees who handled the set-up of the convention and congratulated them all.

For the closing session two speakers of outstanding ability were on the program, Miss Margaret Slattery, the internationally known Boston evangelist, and Hon. Charles H. Tuttle, United States attorney for New York. Each of them had a message most timely for such a convention, and each of them held their audience under the spell of their craftsmanship.

For her subject Miss Slattery chose "The Scientific Approach To Life". In an impassioned way she pleaded for men and women to approach life and religion from a scientific standpoint, and said: "If we would approach our problems from a scientific standpoint, very shortly we should solve them."

Personal Responsibility

She urged a personal responsibility for every Christian, saying that while organizations were good, they squeezed the individuality and personality out of one, and that if this country continued in building up organizations that very soon we should all be clerks.

"Prayer is sometimes the most terrible thing to do," she said. "How dare we pray and still plan for war? How dare we pray for the church and defeat every child labor bill that is presented? The trouble is we are in a fog, and fog never illuminates a thing, it merely hides it.

"We are much like Rome. Even our sporting instincts are becoming deadened and our men cannot even play golf unless there is money up on the game. You can't fool this generation of young people, that's why they don't attend church in larger numbers than they do."

Miss Slattery is one of the most unusual speakers ever heard on a platform in this city. At times her words have the cutting edge of the sword of the avenger, at other times she pleads in tones that touch the heart. A remarkable woman, one who was an addition to the convention.

She took time to compliment New Castle for "The Castleton", and said that it was a joy to live in such hotels.

Religious Education

The address of Mr. Tuttle was a plea for a more extended program of religious education. He argued that no child was properly educated until it received the proper sort of religious education and called upon communities such as this to see to it that the children were properly instructed along this line.

"We could not have such a convention in New York," he said. "The hope of the future lies in week-day religious training and we must have it or our church foundations will be weakened."

The tendency to slight the privilege of voting he termed a "weakening of our civic responsibilities". Mr. Tuttle is a scholarly speaker and his address was a most polished one.

The music of the closing night was a feature. The huge chorus choir filled the stage and the singing was an inspiration. Under the leadership of John W. Owens, the voices sounded like a huge quartet and the visitors will go back home with the remembrance of the splendid work. Garth Edmundson was at the console of the Greer Memorial organ.

As a special feature George Anthony and Harry Evans sang two duets, with Edwin Lewis at the piano. The work of Anthony and Evans was given an ovation.

Because of the pressure of time the devotional period at the opening of the program was shortened, the lesson period being passed and only prayer being offered. This was offered by Rev. C. J. Williamson, pastor of the Highland United Presbyterian church. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Samuel E. Irvine, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church.

So ended the 65th convention of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association. It is doubtful if the Sabbath school workers of the state will attend such a convention in a long time, and by the same sign it is doubtful if they will forget this one in many years.

New Castle has demonstrated what it can do with a big convention. Everything was done in such an efficient manner that at no time did there seem to be any crowding, and yet the registration figures of this convention surpassed anything ever attempted in this field of endeavor.

The only garment fit for a man to be seen in is the kilt.—Richard Sikert.

Miss Brown Is Able Speaker

Makes Address At Conference On Young People's Work

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH FILLED TO CAPACITY

"Look at the Immediate Future" and "Standard Training Schools" were the two main subjects discussed at the meeting of the Young People's Division Conference of the State Sabbath School convention at the First Presbyterian church Friday afternoon.

The auditorium of the church was filled to capacity by delegates desiring to hear more about the work among the young people of the church. Presiding at the meeting was Prof. O. R. Myers of Huntingdon, Pa., who conducted the devotionals and led in prayer.

Immediately following the devotionals Mr. Ritchie presented the work of the American branch of the Scriptural Gift Mission with a branch office at Philadelphia and headquarters in London, England. Telling of the missionary work they do and how they help communities.

Miss Letititia Brown, associate Young People's superintendent division of the state was the first speaker. Miss Brown's talk was about "A Look at the Immediate Future." Speaking at length about the state regional conference instead of the state conference for young people and of the benefits of the regional conferences. These regional conferences were held for the first time last year and will be held again this year. There are seven regional conferences conducted over the state. Speaking also of the state camps, activities, organized classes and promotion of young people's work in general.

Charles E. Garran of Malden, Mass., spoke on the subject "Standard Training Schools." Telling about the community training school, about religious training schools and the qualities a teacher should have. The preparation for teaching and teaching the Bible in present day terms. The teacher as a guide and telling stories illustrating points of his subject.

Another interesting feature of this conference was the departmental conferences.

Friday the subject for discussion in these three different groups was "The Community Problem." Dr. Frank McKibben spoke to the Intermediate group, Roy A. Burkhart to the Senior group, Charles E. Garran to the Young People group. In each of the groups there was a general discussion of problems young people's workers have.

Arrest Four Youths As Members Of Gang In Local Robberies

Police Find Code Book Used With Many Local Places Listed

Visit To Standard Brewery Building Proves Undoing Of Gang

A gang of youths, ranging in age from 12 to 16 years, apparently trained in all the finer arts of robbery and responsible for a large share of the robberies occuring here in past months, is now being rounded up by the authorities of this city and Campbell, O.

Three of the gang are in the city jail here, as a result of the strenuous activities of Detective C. C. Horner and Officer Thomas Lynch on Friday, while af fourth and slightly older member of the gang is in custody of the Campbell, O., authorities as a result of four robberies at that place last night.

Three or four members of the gang are still at large and are being sought, both by the authorities of New Castle and Campbell. It is believed that they will be apprehended. The gang has its headquarters according to the police here in the South Beaver street district.

Members of the gang under arrest here are Mike Perrett, aged 13, John Ross, aged 14, and Dominick Lambert, aged 12. Ollie Gallagher, aged 15, of this city, a fourth member of the gang is under arrest at Campbell.

Cause of Round Up

The latest robberies here that were the result of the roundup were those at the Bratschie Coal Yard in the rear of the Pennzoil Service station on South Jefferson street, at the Jefferson street Bakery, the A. & P. Store, 18 South Jefferson street and at the plant of the former Standard Brewing company on Sampson street.

The first of these was on Thursday morning, where the boys jacked up a truck of Bratschie and took off the two front tires and sold them to a man on Jefferson street.

Thursday night, the gang entered the Jefferson Baking company plant and secured $2 in cash. The A. & P. store was entered the same night. Entrance was effected through the back door of the cellar and up into the store proper by forcing up a trapdoor in the floor.

Here several cartons of cigarets, some candy and other goods were taken also $7.01 in pennies. The boys spent some time in this place, opening a can of sardines and other goods and having a feed. Not satisfied with this, they took a basket of over ripe pears and smashed them all over the store.

The plunder secured was taken that night and hidden in an old house on Diamond Way and opposite the Rieck-McJunkin Dairy company barns.

Put Plunder In Safe

Friday morning, they took the plunder valued at about $25 and went over to the Sampson street plant of the Standard Brewing company. Effecting an entrance, they first went to the room in the tower of the building. From there they went down to the office and managing to figure out the combination of the safe there, opened it. They then placed the plunder in the safe and locked it.

They then proceeded to smash steam guages, break windows and do all kinds of damage to the building. This was their undoing. The watchman happened in on the scene and managed to capture one of the boys, Mike Perrett. He called the police.

Officers Horner and Lynch hurried to the place. The other three members of the gang saw and recognized the police car and officers before it could reach the plant, and they made their getaway.

Making their way to an alley at the rear of the plant, they managed to get out on the Pennsylvania railroad tracks. The officers gave chase. They went to the Shenango Pottery, then up the Pennsylvania railroad tracks, over to the McCleary avenue bathing beach and then on to the Grasselli Chemical plant.

Boys Ford River

While Officer Lynch hung onto the trail from the south side, Officer Horner commandeered a truck and made for the farthest end of the Grasselli plant. The officers were fast closing in on the boys. Finally the three forded the Shenango river and made their getaway at the time.

Ross was finally arrested at his home, while Lambert was apprehended about 3:30 o'clock on the street by Officer Lynch after a chase. The other boy escaped so far, although he is known and will be captured soon, the police say.

In the job at Campbell last night Gallagher and three companions robbed a grocery store, a lumber yard office and two gasoline service stations.

It was not so much what had already been done by the gang that startled the police, but the evidences of past and continued criminal intent found in possession of the boys.

There were found in their possession quite a large number of keys used in connection with Yale, Sargent and other high-class locks. They bore various marks of identification placed on them by the boys, and had also been filed to meet the requirements of the locks on which they were to be used.

The startling find of the police was, however, a small black book in which was found a list of local stores to have been visited last night and a list of the articles which it was planned to take at each place.

The places listed for last night were Fisher Brothers' store on the Public Square, Moe's pawnshop, in the immediate vicinity, and Book's shoe store. While money was the main objective in every instance, it had been planned to get a revolver, holster, ammunition, etc., at the pawnshop and articles of wearing apparel at Fisher Brothers' store and shoes at Book's store.

In the book was one of the most accurately compiled codes imaginable, which the boys evidently used in letting each other know where they were going and how to get into a place, the danger to be expected, etc.

In the book were a number of places listed for robbery. The code was used in telling how to get in, etc. The code had characters and letters standing for "side window", "easy to get in", "dog at place", "people residing upstairs", etc.

There was also contained in the book an indexed list of keys and the numbers and identification marks of the same. Gallagher, captured at Campbell, is said to be the leader of the gang, while another sought here and who escaped Friday, is believed to be the brains of the outfit He is the oldest member of the gang His capture is momentarily expected

After being reprieved eight times, Scott won his bet with Dick Loeb and escaped the gallows by his own act.

Mrs. Frances Grayson Confident Of Victory In Atlantic Flight

Declares She Will Be First Woman Flier To Span Atlantic By Air

About To Realize Fulfillment Of Dream Of Several Years, Says Aviatrix

By FRANCES WILSON GRAYSON
(Written by the daring aviatrix on the eve of her flight from America to Denmark exclusively for International News Service.)
(Copyright, 1927, by International News Service.)

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Maine, Oct. 15.—I am a child of destiny.

I am about to realize the fulfillment of a dream of several years.

I am to be the first woman to span the broad expanse of the Atlantic by air.

My plane "The Dawn" will awaken American women to greater efforts in aviation and will bind together closer the women of two continents.

My heart is filled with joy. The greatest opportunity of my career is at hand.

We are ready, my plane, "The Dawn," my pilot, Wilmer L. Stultz and my navigator, Brig Goldsborough. We are all in the pink.

All we ask is the favor of good weather throughout the trip. We will not be hurried.

Appears Confident

I am going to win. I am going to place American women in the front rank of aviation pioneering. When "The Dawn" leaves the beach here a successful venture will have been begun.

Our hop to Copenhagen is the culmination of many secret desires to do big things in aviation. As I look back, I remember that for two years I wanted to fly. But business made heavy demands on my time. I didn't feel I could afford the time or the money.

I realized that aviation was a coming thing of importance in world events. It was to play a large part in international relationship and as a means of international commercial transportation. That in itself was the first interest aviation held for me.

Early last spring I started to fly. I suddenly wanted to fly across the Atlantic. Several times I was at Curtis Field while preparations were being made for transatlantic flights, and in my amateur way wondered why manufacturers of planes were building land planes to fly across the Atlantic.

In my moments of serious thought about the possibilities of aviation I wondered if a woman couldn't successfully organize an expedition for a transatlantic flight. I then looked into the airplane market for a land and water plane. I wanted one that would ride the waves if I were forced to come down at sea. In my search I found that the Sikorsky Corporation was building such a plane.

I wanted to make it a woman's program exclusively. Therefore, I didn't want any but women interested in the financing of the flight.

About that time Mrs. Aage Ancker, of Copenhagen, arrived in this country from Europe. She too was interested in aviation. We discussed my ambitions and she decided I could carry out such a program. She then placed money at my disposal for the expense of fitting out the expedition.

How we have strived to make ready for the flight is really known only to us who are about to entrust our lives to the worthiness of the plane and the wisdom of our plans.

I realize full well the lateness of the season for trans-Atlantic flight, I realize also, however, that the time will come when we will be flying across the oceans the year around.

Ship Is Sturdy

Our ship is sturdy and can ride the waves if necessary. I hold no fears for our safety in the event we are forced to come down at sea.

The weather is now favorable, I believe, though it has taken weeks of patient waiting to obtain such conditions while others were making an effort to be the first to cross the Atlantic.

I feel sure that our flight will be successful and that a woman—an Indiana girl—can succeed in such a venture despite the kindly warnings of many.

I feel that those who have cautioned us against going did so because they were not close enough to the picture. I believe we will succeed. I may be wrong but at this writing I think I'm right.

That is my attitude as I am about to draw away from the shores of our wonderful United States headed for the hospitable shores of old Europe—to awaken a new dawn for American womanhood and cement the friendship of the women of the world.

SEVERAL PAIRS OF BROTHERS IN SPORT WORLD

The presence of the Waner brothers in the recent world's series drew attention again to the brother combinations in baseball. But here is pictorial proof that brothers share honors in sports other than the diamond game. The three jockeys shown above are (left to right) "Mite," Donald and J. C. Mergler, all brothers and snapped at Laurel, recently. The Thomas brothers, Lloyd at half and Max at full, are stars of the University of Southern California grid team. Hugh Glendon has just joined his brother Dick at Columbia University to help the latter prep Columbia's rowing crew. Hugh, Above, and Dick are wearing their fall lids.

Shaver Issues Call For Meeting

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—A call was issued here today by Clem Shaver, chairman, assembling the Democratic National Committee in Washington on January 12. The meeting is for the purpose of selecting the site for next year's convention.

Shaver said it was the unanimous wish of all members with whom he had talked that a neutral site be selected, somewhere in the Middle West. Bids already have been received from Boston, Cleveland, Detroit, Denver, Miami and Atlanta, while offers are expected from Chicago, San Francisco, Atlantic City and the Twin Cities.

Now Dora has come forward to ask what it is that makes the Mexican troops so revolting.

REMUS PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO MURDER CHARGE

(International News Service)

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 15.—A plea of not guilty to the indictment charging him with murdering his estranged wife, Mrs. Imogene Holmes Remus, 38, here October 6, last was voiced today by George Remus, 49, former multi-millionaire "bootleg king" when arraigned before Common Pleas Judge Chester R. Shook. November 14 was fixed by Judge Shook as the date for the trial of Remus who is accused of first degree murder.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Oct. 15.—Harry Corrie of 3905 Third avenue, Beaver Falls, was placed under arrest at the home of friends near Darlington by Chief of Police Ray Gorrell of College Hill and Sergeant Dewey Gorrell of Beaver Falls, charged with desertion from the United States army. Chief Gorrell took the boy to Columbus today, the nearest military post.

According to word received from J. R. McGinness, second lieutenant, tenth infantry, Corrie deserted from his post, Fort Hayes, O., September 21, 1927. He is registered as being over 21 years of age, but the boy states that he is but 18.

How Do You Pay Your Church Pledges Or Dues?

Your church needs your financial assistance in a prompt and business-like manner. Your dues and pledges should be paid promptly to enable your church to maintain a good paying habit record.

There are some people who carry memberships in a church, but fail to realize their financial responsibility—or don't want to, because they apparently are satisfied to have the others pay the preacher. Some folks take pride in being a member of a church, especially when their preacher has done something worthy of note or the members having built a beautiful new building. Do you want your neighbor to pay your church obligations?

The churches do not report how people pay their pledges and dues. This space is not paid for by any church, but as the New Castle Credit Exchange is a Civic Institution working for the betterment of the Community, we have cheerfully devoted this space to bring to your attention the need of prompt financial support to your church.

FLYING

Quicker take-offs, landing in smaller spaces, stability during engine trouble, greater knowledge of the weather and improved facilities for "riding" it are the problems to be solved if aviation is to come into its own in the commerce of the world. This is the opinion of Guggenheim, head of the foundation which is spending much money for the promotion of aeronautics. He is right in believing that the time has come to concentrate on these problems rather than give so much attention to stunts and spectacular ocean flights. There is still a lot of shop and laboratory work to be done if flying is to reach its real possibilities.

THEY HAVE TO LIVE

Methodist preachers, meeting in various conferences this fall, show a practical turn of mind. They talk about a living wage and it is well they should. In an Illinois conference $2,000 and a house are proposed as the minimum compensation. Helpful preaching calls for a great deal of intellectual equipment, to say nothing about moral fitness. Education and training cost real money—lots of it. Nobody has a right to expect good preaching from a man who can't meet the interest on his loans. Two thousand and a house are little enough.

A NEW MOVIE

Comes now George K. Spoor, pioneer motion picture producer, who has an invention to eliminate the flatness of pictures. Pictures, if the Spoor invention is successful, will have depth. We marvel at the inventions of the modern age. They are still, many of them, in crude form. Radio is imperfect. Aviation is in its raw beginnings. Motion pictures are filled with opportunities for improvement. Don't be discouraged. There's still a heavy demand for genius—and hard work.

A GOOD PLACE TO WORK

Chicago reports that men in the building trades are averaging more than $1.50 an hour. Men getting the wages that are common today make poor audiences for soap-boxers. Go to Europe and see what men and women are paid and how they live. If you have any doubt about America as a good place to live in, get the facts.

TO MAKE DRIVING SAFE

All the blame for motor car accidents must not be put on the drivers. County commissioners, township supervisors—road makers and managers everywhere—should be called upon to eliminate deep, wide and unnecessary ditches. Many roads which are a perpetual danger could be made fool proof. Making a road smooth enough and wide enough is not doing all that ought to be done. How about the big ditch? How about spending a reasonable amount of money for protecting fences? Give the driver a chance.

Foster's Weather Prognostication

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—A storm wave of mild intensity is expected to cross continent during week centering on October 17, during a period of mild weather extremes and above normal temperatures; this storm wave will not be expected to reach farther south than central transcontinental storm path nor to cause much precipitation in any section of the country. Two periods of stormy weather were expected to occur during October; the first, centering on 2, is now history and in all respects was of greater force than indicated thru these bulletins. The second, expected to center on 22, to be more severe than the first, but not so liable to result in storms of dangerous character. Storm wave centering on 22 will be expected to cause moderately heavy general precipitation; not so heavy as during storm wave centering on 2, but averaging about to a little above normal on north Pacific slope, in eastern great central valleys and in Atlantic coast sections.

Crop weather of 1928 season for North America looks more favorable to winter crops than to spring planted crops as a general average for the continent. Planting period during spring of 1928 will be cool and wet, temperatures and precipitation to May 15 not expected to average favorable to spring planting and sowing for the continent. General moisture during winter of 1927-28 will be ample for all purposes; warm, growing weather will be late in arriving to most section. Late summer and early fall of 1928 will average below normal precipitation for the continent, too dry for best results except harvesting. This combination of expected circumstances makes it advisable to cater to winter grains on suitable lands and to cultivate well and deep for spring planted crops. Such advice is necessarily of a general character and in trying to apply same to your locality, expected local conditions must be considered.

Stock-raising agriculturists are now looking into one of their greatest annual problems. According to average reports of present conditions, there is no danger of a shortage of provisional animals, rough feeds or soft corn during the present fall at least. The average present estimate places North American crop of merchantable corn at considerably under two billion bushels. But North America does not need two billion bushels of milling grades of corn nor has an export demand for milling grades that would bring the total demand to that figure. Although corn is bringing an average of about 25 cents more per bushel than last year, every bushel fed to hogs is bringing about five cents less than last year; this, in the fact of what promises to be a short crop of corn. The old saying that "short crops have long tails" seems to apply to present conditions. September weather increased the total corn crop by many millions of bushels, but will not likely increase the profits of those who raised it nor to increase total crop of merchantable corn. There is always a good demand for our corn-fed meat products, but American standards of living will not permit of profitable export in competition with corn raising countries whose living standards are lower than ours. It is not surprising that, with a small crop in view, September deliveries of corn in Chicago were almost double those of last year. A burnt child dreads the fire.

PONTIAC CHIEF OF THE FLEET — PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

120,000

PONTIAC SIXES IN NINE MONTHS

—43,000 more than were produced in all of 1926, when this brilliant General Motors product set a world record for a new make of car!

—an amazing record, first because of its sheer magnitude; and second because it has been made during the most competitive year in automotive history!

—proof that the whole world acknowledges the superiorities of Fisher bodies in styling, comfort and construction; proof that the whole world is learning how Pontiac smoothness, power and silence cannot be duplicated in its price field—for the Pontiac Six engine is the largest used in any six priced below $1,000.

—Fisher body luxury! The highest type of six-cylinder performance! Now both are combined at the lowest price in history—$745 for the two-door Sedan!

Come in! See today's Pontiac Six! Learn how little it really costs to own a high quality six—the six whose volume supremacy is proved by spectacular popularity.

Seventh Ward

Plan Hallowe'en Celebration For Seventh Ward

Ward Has Not Had Celebration For Years; Other News Of Seventh Ward

The seventh ward will have a Hallowe'en celebration this year. A number of years ago it was the custom to have a Hallowe'en celebration in the seventh ward district, but for the past several years those who desired to join this kind of a celebration have gone to the uptown district and entered into the celebration there.

A permit for holding this kind of a celebration has been secured by those in charge and plans are now being made. In all probability the event will take place on Hallowe'en night, which is on Monday evening, October 31.

This event will be especially for the people of the seventh ward and it is expected that plans for a celebration of this nature again in the ward will meet with the enthusiasm of the people. It will be a regular Hallowe'en celebration. Watch the paper for further announcements.

ERROR IN COMMITTEE

In giving the names of the committee in charge of the Hallowe'en party to be given by the Mabel Wison lodge on October 27, there was one name wrong. The committee is Mrs. Grace Stokely, Mrs. Viola Evans and Mrs. Flossie Wilson.

Civic Club Elects Officers For Year

Grove City Women Hold Opening Meeting Of Season

GROVE CITY, Pa., Oct. 15.—The Women's Community Civic club held their opening meeting of the season yesterday afternoon at the Penn Grove hotel.

Mrs. E. C. Myers was elected to fill the position of president for the coming year in place of Mrs. R. M. Montgomery, who had already tendered her resignation. Other new officers who took charge of the meeting yesterday include the following ladies: Mrs. John P. Campbell, recording secretary; Mrs. Catherine Schimmelfeng, treasurer; Mrs. C. Wray Campbell, corresponding secretary.

The chairmen of the various committees of last year were re-appointed to serve for the coming year and are included in following list: Membership committee, Mrs. O. H. Firm; reception and entertainment, Mrs. J. P. Henry; home economics and thrift, Mrs. C. G. Harshaw; child welfare, Mrs. F. W. Daugherty; sanitation and aesthetics, Mrs. H. L. R. Anderson; publicity, Mrs. O. O. Bashline; charity and beneficence, Mrs. H. O. White; parliamentary, Mrs. C. G. Monroe; finance, Mrs. C. F. Fithian; program, Mrs. J. W. Bonnett; Americanization and citizenship, Mrs. S. R. Montgomery; legislative, Mrs. Creig S. Hoyt; community service, Mrs. E. C. Myers; music, Mrs. Weir C. Ketler.

Last year's record of work done by the club in this community was very good and the new officers are anxious that the enthusiasm of the ladies will not decrease. The meeting was attended by a large number of the membership.

PLAINGROVE

PASTOR'S RECEPTION

A very pleasant gathering at the Mt. Pleasant church on Friday evening, October 7, was a reception for the pastor, Rev. McCaskey, who has returned to the pastorate of the church for another year. Several selections of music were rendered by the choir and a short address of welcome to the pastor and his family was given by Orville Welton. After a piano duet by Elinor Rodgers and Leona McCommons the pastor led in prayer.

A delicious lunch of ice cream and cake was served by the ladies. Rev. McCaskey then made a few remarks expressing his appreciation of the evening's entertainment and his pleasure at being permitted to spend another year on the charge.

Afraid Of Losing His Job, Plant Worker Ends Life

WOODLAWN, Pa., Oct. 15.—Telling his wife Mary as he left his home on his way to work in the local tin mill of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation "that he would not be home if he lost his job at the mill," William Casper, Polish, 43 hanged himself to the rafters of a new building. His body was found by workmen when they came to their daily labor at the building.

Casper's dinner bucket was found not far from the barrel on which he had climbed to throw the rope over the rafters, then upset the barrel with his feet.

Weekly Review Of New York Market

By W. S. COUSINS
International News Service Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—A revival of foreign loaning, principally to European governments and financial institutions, was the outstanding incidents of the week in the money markets.

The bulk of the new money went to the German states and the banking institutions of the German capital, the latter for the purposes of agricultural loans, but a wide range of continental European and South American countries also participated in the flow of new American capital to these outside enterprises. Approval by the State Department of the Polish loan and the French Government refunding operation, involving the sum of $78,000,000 assures a continuation of this foreign financing, which has reached the huge sum of a billion dollars thus far this year.

Prices Irregular

Movements of speculative stock prices were irregular and erratic this week, representing chiefly the play of professional activity in and out of Wall Street. The mid-week holiday had the effect of slowing up participation in the market in the first two days of the week, and in that period price movements were generally in a narrow range and selling pressure prevented any appreciable rally in either the rails or the industrials.

In anticipation of a considerable decrease in the aggregate of brokers' borrowings from the Reserve Bank members as revealed in Thursday's weekly statement, the professionals hurriedly covered up their short commitments near the close of the market, with the resultant sharp advances in prices of representative stocks. Brilliant moves were also noted in a number of the high priced specialties enjoying professional support.

Within the last week or two there has been a growing conviction in the financial district that the bull movement in industrial stocks has far outstripped the general expansion in trade and business and that industrial accomplishments of the year has been disappointing at least when measured against expectations; that professional activities and inside buying of some of the speculative favorites have forced prices to unwarranted levels and that the technical position of the market was not nearly as good as a month or two ago.

Heavy Selling Volume

The evidences at hand consist chiefly in the outpouring of a heavy volume of selling orders at certain levels, the inability of the market to rally beyond a certain point and the falling off in the volume of investment buying. Looking outside of the stock market the decline in steel buying and steel producing is clearly shown in the current reports and the oil markets have again been unsettled by the slashing of prices of crude oil and gasoline; copper buying has tapered off; the automobile market has been unsettled by the "Ford Mystery."

Counter balancing all of these factors has been the enormous and apparently increasing volume of funds available for investment and speculation, and the growing confidence of conservative investors in the stability of American enterprises. Liberal dividend policies and expanding money-making facilities have won thousands of new friends for the corporations which now boast a wider distribution of their stocks and bonds than at any previous time in the nation's history. Confidence of this kind is not easily shaken and stocks purchased on this basis do not find their way back to the market on every minor "shake-out."

Portersville Man Joins "400" Club

Ira Cleland's Acre Of Potatoes Shows 450 Bushels By Test

BUTLER, Pa., Oct. 15.—Another member was added to the 400 Bushel Potato Club, when an acre of Ira Cleland's field at Portersville was weighed by County Agent W. F. Mandeville, and found to yield at the rate of 450 bushels per acre.

Mr. Cleland is the first member of his community and the second in the county to become a member of this club but the fact that the amount of seed used in this community has been gradually increasing indicates that the number of growers and also the acreage is becoming larger and that others will qualify in the near future.

The methods used were very similar to those used by other members with one exception. This is the first yield of this kind in Butler county grown on a timothy sod and one of the few grown on such a sod in Pennsylvania. The records show that over ninety per cent of those qualifying use clover or some other legume. The sod, of course, was well manured at the rate of 12 tons per acre, and an application of 2-85 at the rate of 600 lbs. per acre in the row at planting time, in addition to 800 lbs. of acid broadcast. Sprays were put on and the plants were kept covered until they were dead.

In addition to being the second member to qualify, Mr. Cleland becomes the second grower to become eligible for the trip to the Ohio State fair offered by the Butler County National bank.

City To Resurface Cedar Street In '28

Cedar street will be resurfaced next year, it has been informally decided upon by city council during a conference with C. C. Coulthard, superintendent, P.-O. Railway company. The company is installing new rails.

Fundamentally the child of today is "all right", and that means that the citizen of tomorrow, with all the advantages of present day life, will be just a little better than the citizen of today.—George C. Appell.

PETER'S ADVENTURES in ANIMAL LAND

BY MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

NO CAT IN SPITE OF HIS WHISKERS

"G-R-R! A Two-Legs!" growled the whiskered face, and scowled at Peter. "So 'tis you who have scared Mrs. Rabbit away from the hole. Well, sir, you didn't count on me! She is a timid little creature, afraid of her shadow, but I am brave and bold, and I'll bite a piece out of your leg, that I will!

"I'll teach you to drive my neighbors away from their very doorsteps! Not that I care much for Mrs. Rabbit but she is a pleasant, harmless little body, and it will not hurt me to do her a good turn.

"Besides, I hate the Two-Legs. Mean things—their idea of having a good time is to chase me up a tree! Can't catch me—I fool them every time. But they do their best to make life unpleasant for me.

"Never guessed I'd have a chance to hunt a Human, but here it is, and I'd be as stupid as an Owl not to take it!"

"Good gracious, Cat! What is the matter with you, anyhow?"

Being spoken to so rudly by a perfect stranger to whom he'd done no harm, didn't at all please Peter.

"What's all this talk about hating the humans? You ought to be ashamed of yourself! Don't they feed you and house you and give you a warm seat by the fire?" demanded he.

The words were scarcely out of Peter's mouth when with a leap and a bound the creature was on top of the log, shaking its whiskers in the boy's very face.

"Stuff and nonsense! Seat by the fire, indeed! As if I'd hang around indoors when I might be out in the woods. Cat! Who's a Cat? Pooh! No fun in chasing you! You're too stupid. Dare say you wouldn't even run. I'd only waste my time trying to start something! Look again, Two-Legs! Did you ever know a Cat to have teeth or a tail like mine?"

The creature whirled around and a tail hit Peter on the arm. Then back it switched again and now teeth were wittin an inch of the boy's nose. Peter stepped back in alarm.

"Teeth!" exclaimed he. "Why, you must have fifty! And, good gracious, Aunt Jemima! You haven't a bit of fur on the end of your tail. You're no Cat, that's a fact, though you have whiskers like him. But who in the world are you?"

Next—"Saucy Somebody."

Convention Spends $60,000 While Here

According to a businessman the Sunday School workers three day meeting here resulted in approximately $60,000 being spent here, he said. He figured that each of the 4,000 delegates spent $5 a day each day they were here.

The person who pines over his hard luck needs to spruce up a bit.

Fellow Rotarian:—

We will have another speaker of national prominence for Monday, Col. Leroy F. Smith of Washington, D. C., attached to the general staff of the U. S. army who will speak on "Our Peace Establishment."

This has to do with our national defense and will be of interest to pacifist and pugilist alike. Col. Smith is speaking before Rotary clubs and American Legion posts throughout the country and local people who have heard him say he has an intensely interesting message.

Bob McKinney was to sing a solo but sprained his ankle. Rather than disappoint the members he has arranged to have two equally as good vocalists present to take his place.

Boy Scout Work Is Of Great Benefit To Lads

"A man's game cut down to boy's size," scouting is for boys, all boys, regardless of color, sect or creed and under the able leadership of J. Lee Calahan and his scores of volunteer assistants the Boy Scout movement in Lawrence county has accomplished a tremendous work and an astounding amount of good in the community.

Scouting is based on the universal interest in boyhood it gives the boy a chance for a fuller life in the open and under proper leadersip; it develops in him the natural resourcefulness and the ability to care for himself which is so much required of the boy in later life; it gives him training in the 67 different curricula not found in the school room. In short a Boy Scout is so surrounded with influence of a nature to develop and bring out the best traits of initiative, self reliance and all the positive virtues in contrast to the vices that so often lead boys in the wrong direction.

Since 1922 when the first troop of scouts were organized in the county under the direction of the Rotary club there have been 46 troops organized. Over 4,000 boys have come under the guiding influence of the Boy Scout movement. These troops are sponsored by the various churches, schools and clubs. They assist without pay, the various civic organizations, the city departments, state organizations, churches and the like. In co-operation with the Pennsylvania state department of forestry they have planted in Lawrence county some 35,000 young trees with no cost to the county. On Memorial Day and other national holidays they are always ready to do their daily good turn. A gerat many of the poorer families have been benefitted by the various troops at Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Camp Phillips, where during the summer months the boys are taught the many mysteries of out door life, is a model of regulation and discipline. The boys take pride in keeping fit mentally and morally.

The Scout oath is "On my honor I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country to obey the scout law to help other people at all times, too keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.'

The executive commitee and officers of the Lawrence county council of Boy Scouts of America is as follows:

Judge S. Plummer Emery, Dr. W. C. Wallice, Attorney R. L. Wallace, David M. Kirk, J. W. Offutt, C. A. Martin, Father F. S. Clifford, Rev. Harrison Davidson, DeLace Cole, Frank F. Fischer, J. Lee Calahan, John E. Dye, Louis B. Round, W. G. Ayers, Prof, T. W. Johns, Rev. C. J. Williamson, Charles E. McGrath, Prof. James M. Hughes, Daniel Reebel, Owen P. Fox, Alfred Chilton, Harold R. McCulloch, Charles T. Metzler, Rex. L. Patch, Wm. Kerr, C. R. Knallay.

Welty Rugh,, J. K. Hess,, W. J. Wray,, Ben Agnew, Mr. Thomas, Charles Park,, Louis E. Bogle, M. V. Hyde,, Rev. Bell, F. E. Bailey, R. C. Gilmore, John G. Jones, Rongner Benson, Wilbur Hughes Jno. W. Illinois Posse Surrounds Trio Of Bank Robbers

Trio Alleged To Have Robbed Bank Of $4,600 Believed Surrounded In Woods

(International News Service)

MILL CREEK, Ill., Oct. 15.—Three bank robbers, one of them believed to be a woman, are cornered in a thick woods near here this morning while more than 100 officers and citizens who have been maintaining a vigil since yesterday afternoon are waiting to shoot to kill the bandits when they are discovered. The trio late yesterday afternoon robbed the First National bank at Grand Tower, Ill., and escaped with between $2,000 and $4,600 in cash.

Sheriff George W. Lyerly of Union county is at the head of the posse, which includes deputies from Alexander, Pulaski, Johnson, Jackson and Williamson counties. Sheriff Flanigan of Jackson county and Sheriff Roche of Alexander county are in charge of one cordon of men surrounding the trio.

P. H. C. Members Plan For Parties

Alternating with the regular sessions held by New Castle circle No. 5, P. H. C., throughout the winter will be the series of parties sponsored by the "Booster club" of the circle.

At the recent meeting of the club held at the office of the past president, A. L. Conn, arrangements were about completed for the opening party of the season to be held on October 26 for the members and friends of the local circle. It will be a Hallowe'en masquerade and like all other events under the auspices of the club, promises to be largely attended, not only by home people but a number of visiting circles will add to the success of the event. The committee in charge follows:

Past Presidents A. L. Conn, R. E. Erwin, John L. Cunningham, Clara Cunningham, Telitha Richards, President Leola Langsdale and Deputy Blanche Canfield.

James Taylor Joins United States Army

James Taylor, a veteran of the World War, has re-enlisted for service in the army of his country, through the local recruiting office.

During the World War he served with the Fiftieth Infantry in Germany. He has re-enlisted for infantry service in the Hawaiian Islands, the land of sunshine and flowers. He will journey about four thousand miles to reach his destination.

In re-enlisting, he remarked that the young man of today is missing an opportunity, when he fails to accept one of the many offers made by the United States army, which include the opportunity of travel in and to strange lands, the opportunity to learn most any trade desired and the opportunity of adventure.

Young men interested in taking up some of these offers should see the army recruiting officer at the city building, corner of Washington and East streets.

Roaming Round With Richards

Some News, Some Views, But Mostly Just Observations Of Interesting Things Around New Castle.

Sometimes this business of roaming is done far and away from the office and sometimes it is done right in the office. So it was today. W. Miller Wardrop, who used to run the Pennsylvania railroad here, and who did a mighty efficient job of it, came into the oiffce to renew some acquaintanceships and his trip in rolled back a lot of years.

When the colyum conductor first knew him, Mr. Wardrop was some younger than he is now, but not much younger looking. At that time he was running trains for the E. & A. Division in the capacity of trainmaster.

He came to New Castle from Sewickley and like a lot of other good men, learned to like New Castle. So well in fact that he married a New Castle girl. His name now means something in railroad circles. Down in Wilmington, Del., he has the entire Southern Grand Division of the Pennsylvania railroad under his supervision, and some day you are going to find his name on one of the vice president's doors over in Philadelphia. That's just a guess, but watch and see if it doesn't come true.

Perhaps Officer James Wysner, better known as Jimmy, will get rather chesty over this paragraph, but whether he does or not you should know what happened.

A gentleman from near Scranton, Pa., a Rev. Morrison by name, was talking in the Scottish Rite Cathedral lobby about the courtesy of the New Castle police force. "Why," he said, "one of your officers, Wysner by name seeing that I was a stranger in traffic came up and asked me my name, answered a lot of questions for me, and then escorted me across the busy street. That's one way to judge a town, by its policemen and this man Wysner deserves my deepest appreciation."

There you are folks. And Jimmy Wysner was just one of the force who was courteous to the visitors. The cops of this city can be proud of the comments made upon their work during the convention.

Another interesting visitor I met up there was Ben Agnew, a New Castle man who loves to travel. Just now he is preparing to take a little run over to Africa. Just a little trip to see some things he saw 30 years ago. It's just been a few months since he came back from a trip around the world which took him five months. Spent half an hour talking to him and it was as good as a travelogue by Burton Hoymes. India, Java, Japan, Italy, Egypt, any country you care to name, he knows them.

Also learned something. As you may know, the Taj Mahal in India is considered the most beautiful building in the world. But did you know that the Congressional Library in Washington is second only to the Taj Mahal? Neither did I until Mr. Agnew made the statement.

Met the coach of the Dayton Steel high school football team this morning and got the usual earful of pessimism affected by football coaches. "Green team, light team, no attack, loose defense, ad infinitum, ad nauseum. Did you ever see or hear of a football coach who admitted that he had a good team?

Nothing to do now till next week.

Sawyer Succeeds To Presidency Of Big Concern

Expansion of the business of Stevens & Wood, Incorporated, consulting, construction and appraisal engineers with offices in New York and Youngstown, has resulted in a material enlargement of this organization. W. H. Sawyer has joined the organization as president, succeeding in that position R. P. Stevens, who will concentrate his work, as chairman of the board and executive committee, on the financial and public utility phases of the business. Mr. Sawyer will devote his time principally to the business-engineering management of the organization.

Stevens & Wood are the engineers who planned and constructed the Toronto power station for the Penn-Ohio System and are now enlarging that plant to double its original capacity. Work also is being done throughout most of the eastern states and in Alaska. It is particularly to this field that Mr. Sawyer's wide experience as engineer, operator and executive will add to the effectiveness of the organization.

Boy Scout News

New Wilmington Troop. 1.

A large attendance marked the regular meeting of New Wilmington troop 1 recently. Many visitors were present.

After the usual business meeting, scouting instructions were given. Although practically a new troop, the boys have made a considerable advancement in scoutcraft, and soon will be ranked as a first class troop.

The meeting adjourned after the formal closing exercises.

MORE MALES ARE TEACHING SCHOOL, RECORDS DISCLOSE

School teaching is appealing more strongly to male teachers, according to the records at the office of County Superintendent of Schools John C. Syling. Out of 292 teachers employed this year, 51 are males. This is a much larger percentage than for several years past. Nearly every district in the county now has one or more male teachers.

SHORT ROMANCES OF EVERYDAY LIFE

Detective Duty

By Joella Johnson

THE Great Detective hastily adjusted a fresh wig over his ears as he saw the tall figure of a woman approaching with slow and careful footsteps. She came sailing majestically towards him, distress written in every feature of her face. Her eyes were dilated with emotion. This looked like an interesting case. He straightened the wig a trifle.

"Reggie McWhortle," cried the woman, making a lurch at his wig, "what in the name of common sense are you doing with a rhubarb leaf on your head? And don't stand there gawking at me. Run over to the store and get me a package of epsom salts and a pound of soda crackers. Hurry, now!"

"All right, ma," muttered the Great Detective, swinging down the street. He was disgusted. A fellow got all ready to solve a murder or capture a gang of thugs with nothing but his bare hands, when he was asked to run down to the corner and bring home a few epsom salts and crackers. Perhaps he should be thankful, though, that he had not been asked to wheel Ermintrude out in her pram. Lots of the fellows had to wheel the kids in the family. But his mother hadn't asked him to take Ermy out since the day he had let her play in old man Jenk's fertilizer.

He gave his order at the corner grocery and stood admiring Mr. Griffin's whispers. They fell in a heavy grizzled fringe over the grocer's chest. And there was usually something tangled up in them—sometimes a few beans or a bur or two. What a wonderful disguise they would make for a detective! Reggie was on the point of asking Mr. Griffin if he ever considered cutting his beard —if he would they might make a dicker—when two men ducked in the doorway.

The Great Detective's heart stood still, for each man was carrying a pistol pointed in the general direction of Mr. Griffin's whiskers.

The grocer hastily dropped the tea he had been wrapping and instinctively lifted his hands. Reggie lifted his, too, but as neither of the thugs paid the slightest attention to him he dropped them again and slid behind a barrel of potatoes. His mouth flew open and hung there as one of the men began to pry open the cash register.

"One word out of you," the other thief kept saying to Mr. Griffin, "and I'll plug you."

Behind his sheltering barrel of potatoes the Great Detective thrilled to the core. Right in the thick of a robbery! An eye witness! And doing nothing about it! The thought sent him sidling to the door like an undersized shadow. Evidently his gum shoe practice in the garage stood him in good stead for a backward glance told him that neither of the crooks had noticed him. But Mr. Griffin's eyes were fixed on him in strained intensity.

Out on the sidewalk his mind raced frantically and produced nothing. Elm street was the strictly residential section of Plainsville, and Griffin's grocery was the only sign of trade until you struck Main street. Reggie's eyes flew up and down the green lawns that bordered the street. Not a man or a car or a policeman in sight—nothing but women sitting on the porches sewing and gossiping. A fellow couldn't depend on women. All they'd do would be to squeal and, O dear and good heaven! Desperately his eye fell on the thugs' ear parked close to the curb, engine running. There was a heavy rug in the back seat. A dim idea stirred in his mind—somewhere he had read of a detective who had concealed himself under a bearskin for 49 hours. Reggie leaped into the car, crawled down on the floor and pulled the rug over him.

His heart beat thickly as the two thugs jumped into the car and the machine started up with a jerk. He was in for it now. They were headed towards the city of Mechanicsville, according to their conversation. Griffin's had been the fifth store they had held up that day. Reggie felt his hair sit up in consternation. He had a queer, helpless feeling at the pit of his stomach that the speeding and jolting of the car did not improve.

They drove for hours while Reggie lay lumpily under the rug, wondering what they were doing back home. Eating supper by this time. No, they would be too excited to eat, for by now they would know about the robberies and that he, Reggie McWhortle, was hot on the trail of the yeggs. His mother would cry and wring her hands. Perhaps she would be sorry she had burned "Cutthroat Charlie, the ash-can murderer." He had thought to get a lot of dope on thugs out of that book.

The car stopped so abruptly that the Great Detective's head smashed against the back of the front seat. He lay still until he heard the two men get out and start down the street. Then turtle wise he thrust his head out from under the blanket in time to see them disappear inside the door of a restaurant.

The machine was parked on a darkish side street that ran at right angles to what Reggie recognized at once as the main street of Mechanicsville. He noted with surprise that it was after dark and the street lights were on. As he stared uncertainly at the brightly lighted Main street, an officer sauntered leisurely into view. The Great Detective started towards him with a rush.

"I got a couple of yeggs back here," he panted.

The policeman looked down at the dishevelled boy tugging at his sleeve and laughed tolerantly.

"Good for you," he laughed, slapping Reggie between the shoulder blades.

Much to the Great Detective's surprise, the blow knocked him off his feet. To his further amazement, he felt the tears running down his cheeks and a loud howling sound burst from his throat.

"Never mind, sonny," said the officer, apologetically, picking Reggie up and brushing him off. "Now what were you saying about yeggs?"

Between gulps the Great Detective told his story. After he had finished the officer went to a box stuck on the side of a telephone pole and rung up headquarters. His manner was much more respectful when he came back to Reggie.

"Guess you're right, sonny," he grinned. "Now you just show us where those two birds ducked in to eat and we'll have them right where they belong in a jiffy."

"What would you like for a present, boy?" asked Mr. Griffin, as the Great Detective sat on a barrel of potatoes telling his story.

"Have you ever thought of cutting off your whiskers?" asked Reggie. "They'd make a swell detective disguise," he added tentatively.

"You kin have 'em," shouted Mr. Griffin, striking the counter with his fist. "They're an awful nuisance to me in the Summer anyhow. Allus gettin' in the flypaper. I'll cut 'em off tomorrow!"

"Thanks," said the Great Detective, smiling at the fringe of respectful faces that surrounded him. "I need a good pair of whiskers in my bizniss."

A Strong Heart

By Claire Wesson

THE steam roller man had cut Alan out with Rena. He had taken her to the Danbury movies in his flashing new car that reduced Alan's prudent flivver to the proportions of a tin toy. He grinned brazenly at the young farmer's bristling attitude, sure of its inadequacy to armor the vulnerable parts beneath. The steam roller man had been sophisticated by philanderings in other townships where his itinerant occupation had taken him.

Having stretched himself, the young farmer vaulted the road wall, and began to look over the snugly parked roller. The boiler was breathing heavily. Waves of gassy heat rose from the netted funnel. The smell of warm grease mingled with that of the raw dirt and building wayside.

Alan swung himself up to the driver's platform and touched the lever handles. He did not marvel that the man who was master of these intricacies felt strong at heart. Ever so lightly, he moved a lever, and the immediately answering hiss of steam made him replace it hurriedly. He would have to study out which handle started the engine, and which other might put the roller in motion.

Standing there, Alan began to think he would learn to run such a contraption, leave the farm and get a roller job. That would show Rena where he got off! So intensely was he occupied with his own thoughts that he did not see Rena approach along the country road. The first thing he knew her vivid face was peering up at him beside the roller.

"Oh, Al! Could you start it for a little minute?" she cried.

"Sure thing." Then he dared mightily. "Want to jump up and see how the world looks from here?"

"I never dared ask Mr. Drake for a ride," she said. "There are limits to being a girl. You just don't know how I've longed to have a ride on this roller. Al Brett! Lots of times when he thought I was standing around to kid I've been watching him pull the handles."

The confined steam breathed heavily. The smell of warm grease was slightly sickening. Rena put out her hands and grasped two of the several levers. There was a snort and rattle as she pulled them over. The roller was in motion! Alan grabbed for the steering wheel and swung it into the road.

"I wish Mr. Drake would come along now!" snickered Rena.

Alan was trying to steady himself. It wasn't hard to keep the roller in the middle of the road, but that took so much of his attention that he had no opportunity to study how to stop it. The last thing in the world he wanted was for the steam roller man to appear just now. And there he was rushing up the road. Yonder at his boarding place he had heard the noisy starting of the roller for which he was responsible.

Alan could hardly distinguish his words above the racket of the roller, but he perfectly understood their purport. He also understood that he held some advantage with Rena.

"Turn her off nothing!" retorted Alan. "Can't you see that I'm taking my girl for a ride?"

The steam roller man was furious. But he was helpless, and at a considerable disadvantage as he strode along beside the moving machine. He threatened Alan, and he tried to cajole Rena. Alan was most uncomfortable, but he bluffed it and steered boldly. He knew not how to stop the roller, but he was determined not to give "s trained driver the result of that admission. He felt sure that the engine would soon run out of steam, and he hoped wildly to make an impressive exit from the scene. Rena stood straight beside him, and a rising breeze fanned his sweaty face.

Slowly the roller stopped, gasping a little for breath to still go on. Alan jumped down to the ground and held his weed-stained hand for Rena. Drake's freshly scrubbed hand was lifted, too, but the girl blithely ignored it.

"Sorry, but Alan is going to take me to the movies tonight," she said coolly.

And as Alan's hand tightened, hers gave a convulsive pressure of acquiescence.

Mrs. Barrett Entertains

By Margaret Taylor

ON a Wednesday afternoon. Stores closed for the half-holiday. People automobiling, returning from matinees, sitting on piazzas. Archie Barrett watering a tiny row of geraniums in his front yard.

An atmosphere of newness hovered about. The geraniums were new. The little house was new. He himself was a brand-new husband, and the lady sewing on the piazza a brand-new wife.

They had been married 40 days, and each day had convinced Archie more and more of his tremendous luck. His wife was beautiful. She had a charming disposition. She could fry eggs wonderfully, and when he opened the cans for her she could make the most delicious soup. She could also dust, and she was enchanting in her pretty aprons and caps. And she could mend. That very minute she was darning her husband's socks.

Mr. Barrett squared his shoulders and lifted his head as if to tell the world about it. And just then his glance fell upon an automobile a little way down the road. The automobile was standing still. It had two occupants—a man and a woman. The man appeared to be addressing strong language to the automobile. The lady was trying to soothe him. Barrett recognized the voice of the man. He recognized his face. He hastened to the spot.

When he was not sprinkling his lawn or wiping dishes for his wife Archie had another occupation. He sold ginghams. He had been selling ginghams for quite a while. But he was ambitious. Not all his life would he sell ginghams. He would rise to linens, flannels, silks. Perhaps his ascent might come sooner than he had hoped. The silk manager was going to leave. Mr. Kingsley would be looking around for someone to take his place. And why not he? If he could impress the boss—by this time he had reached the automobile.

"Anything wrong, Mr. Kingsley?" he asked.

Mr. Kingsley stopped swearing at the car, and turned his attention to Barrett. A faint sign of remembering he had seen him somewhere came to his face.

"This blamed car—" he growled.

"Horace!" expostulated Mrs. Kingsley. "Don't know why. Plenty of gas."

"Sometimes they won't," said Barrett. He bent over the radiator investigatingly, omitting to say that he knew nothing whatever about cars.

"Find anything?" inquired Kingsley.

"H'm," thoughtfully from Archie. "Better send for an auto mechanic. He'd know exactly. In the meantime—" he smiled brightly—"I want you and Mrs. Kingsley to have a bite with Mrs. Barrett and myself." He waved his hand, indicating his domain, and pointing to Helen on the piazza.

"But it'll be too much trouble for Mrs. Barrett," demurred Mrs. Kingsley.

"Trouble!" Mr. Barrett's tone said that Mrs. Barrett was used to entertaining legions. "She'll be delighted."

"I'm glad you asked them." Helen had done the honors prettily, and then had maneuvered her husband away for a necessary consultation. "We'll manage fine. There's sliced tongue from the delicatessen store, pickles from there, rolls from the bakery, you can open a can of tomato soup, and—" Mrs. Barrett glowed triumphant—"I've baked a cake!"

"Cake!" Archie's voice rang out with heartfelt emotion. His wife interpreted that emotion for joy.

"Yes," she said, "Isn't it lucky? Something told me to make it. Open the can, and then go and visit with them. I'll have supper in a jiffy."

Archie joined his guests. But he did not know what he said to them, or what they said to him. His castle had collapsed.

When, shortly after they had started housekeeping Helen had set before him a golden-brown cake, baked by her very self. Archie, pulsating with pride, had eaten four pieces. He had been slightly pale for a day or two afterward. Helen had attributed that to his going without his rubbers in the rain, and had baked him another cake.

This time he had eaten only three pieces, the next time two, after that, one. To refuse entirely—to have Helen suspect—he dared not. He would not break his wife's heart.

But he had not foreseen this. It had seemed a golden inspiration to invite the Kingsleys. The way had seemed to lead straight to the managership of the silk department. And after Fortune had begun to smile—in a year or so Mr. Barrett might be a member of the firm.

But now—the reverse picture presented itself. The cake—Mr. Kingsley would eat some of it—he had an irascible disposition—Archie could see himself thrown penniless into a cold, cold world!

One word to Helen, and she would not serve the cake. But that word he would not speak. No, there was nothing to do. Matters must take their inexorable course.

That meal was to him a horrible nightmare. But even in the midst of it, he marveled at the happy adaptability of his wife. She and the Kingsleys might have been old friends.

"And now," said Helen, "comes the piece de resistance—my cake! You needn't eat it unless you want to, Mr. Kingsley. But my husband seems to think it's pretty good."

She looked at him for confirmation. He nodded. With that nod he felt his fate was sealed.

Mrs. Kingsley declined regretfully. She was on a diet as regarded pastry. Mr. Kingsley accepted. Helen beamed as he passed his plate again, and still again.

. . . Archie passed a sleepless night. It was partly due to the cake he had eaten, partly to the cake Mr. Kingsley had eaten. He felt that the sword of Damocles was suspended over his head. When Mr. Kingsley summoned him to the office he was not surprised. Pale-faced he entered.

Mr. Kingsley was not pale. He even seemed jovial. But Archie knew this was mere pretence. He waited for the thunder to roll forth.

"Barrett," spoke Mr. Kingsley without preamble, "that cake—"

"That cake—" echoed Archie idiotically.

"Was immense. It brought back the days of my youth. Yes, sir!" he said enthusiastically. "My wife used to bake cakes like that—when we were first married. It took me a while to get used to them. And after I'd begun to appreciate 'em, hang it if she didn't stop baking 'em that way. But that cake your wife had last night might have been one of the very ones my wife baked 40 years ago! You must invite me again, Barrett."

"Yes, sir," said Barrett, dazedly. He turned to leave.

"And, say, Barrett," asked Kingsley, "do you think you could sell silks?"

The Song of Birds

By Clyde Weldon

BETTY ORDWAY lives in Whiteville, and if the town had ever staged a heauty contest, Betty would have been crowned queen—but it hadn't, so Betty had no crown to make her head uneasy. Still there were other things. For instance, the vanguard of the Summer colony at Lower Lake usually arrived June 15, and it was now the night before.

Betty had just finished washing the supper dishes and stood at the window looking down the road toward the river. She was silent a long time, then:

"Don Endicott and his sister ought to be pulling in here tonight," she remarked.

Her mother skipped a stitch in her knitting, paused, looked up over her glasses, her lips drawing into a thin line. She decided to ignore the remark.

"I hear Jim Haynes is goin' to get a car," she ventured.

"He's got it," Betty returned. "A wheezy, second-hand flivver, and your dutiful daughter is honored with an invitation to take the first ride in it tonight."

"Dutiful!" burst out Mrs. Ordway, at the slightly sarcastic tone of her daughter. "If you were you'd marry Jim Haynes and forget this cigarette smoking Don—"

A long, squawking blast, the rattle and clash of loose gears, and the wheezy throb of carbon-choked cylinders silenced and startled the speaker.

"It's Jim and Lizzie," smiled Betty. "Isn't she sweet?" And she picked up a sweater, pulled a little black kid hat down over her head and went out.

There was more racket, which gradually died out as the car laboriously climbed the hill and continued on out into the country. Two hours later they came back. Jim stopped the car at the top of the hill about 100 yards from Betty's house. She looked up inquiringly.

"Brakes none too good," he explained. "Might not stop on the way down. We'll walk it, then I'll come back and get her."

They sauntered along in silence, but at the gate Jim caught Betty's hand as she was about to lift the latch. He was about to speak when she motioned him to silence. Then he also heard it: the low, droning hum of a perfectly running motor rapidly approaching from the direction they had just come. A moment later a blinding flood of light burst upon them as the long gray racer dipped down over the brow of the hill. There was a rush of air, a cry of recognition, a droaning and they were gone, taking the turn at the foot of the hill on high.

"Some day," frowned Jim, recognizing Dan Endicott, "he won't make that turn and there'll be a hole in the fence and we'll fish him out down below the falls. Betty, will you marry me? Say yes, sweetheart, and don't keep me waiting. You know how much I love you—say you will."

"I—I can't tonight, Jim. I—well, I want to think it over, Jim."

He looked down at her as she withdrew her hand from his, then his eyes turned slowly to the spot where the racing car had disappeared.

"I think I understand," he murmured, then turned and went slowly up the hill.

When Betty entered the house it was dark and she knew the others had retired, so she went to her room, undressed and crawled into bed. The night ride had made her drowsy and she fell asleep at once. Then something seemed to arouse her. Some one was shouting. There were men's voices raised excitedly, the sound of running feet, snatches of talk: "Brakes didn't hold"—"Went right through"—"Fence no good, anyhow"—"They'll get him down below the falls."

Betty lay there stunned, frozen, horrified: She loved Jim, had always loved him, and she let him go away thinking there was another. She cared nothing for Don, but she liked to ride in his racer, and she thought it might spur Jim on to get a car to take her out. He had done so—and this was the end. Jim was dead and she was to blame. Her foolishness had killed him. Suddenly her taut nerves gave way and she burst into choaking sobs, burying her face in the pillows in an effort to shut out the sight from her mental vision—then a hand was laid gently on her heaving shoulders and a voice said:

"Betty—Betty, what is it? Come tell mother—what happened?"

"It's Jim—he's dead," wailed Betty. "Don't you hear them? They are taking him out down at the falls—he went through—"

"Dear, dear, you are dreaming! Wake up! Jim is all right. I saw him go by in the car after you came in. Well, well, well!"

But it had all been too real, Betty could not believe it was all a dream. Still sobbing and trembling violently, she got out of bed and went to the window to try and pierce the darkness of the June night, to see if the fence was still there, but she could see nothing but the black wall of the night.

Jim Haynes, however, was far from being dead. In fact, he was so far from being able to sleep that at that very minute he was on his way to the drug store, where he worked, to get some sleeping powders. And just as he opened the door the telephone rang in the doctor's office in the rear. As the doctor was away, Jim stepped in to take the call. Betty's voice came over the wire:

"Oh! Is it you, Jim? Oh! I'm so glad I was going to ask the doctor to call you. And, Jim dear, you know what you asked me tonight? Well, I have decided, and it is yes, yes, yes! And please come up the first thing in the morning but don't ask me why—just come. And here is a kiss!"

There was a sharp click in his ear that made him jump, then the line went dead. Beyond his first "hello" he had not spoken. His thoughts were going around in circles, and in the center of each was a question mark. Suddenly he realized that it was morning and the sun was streamiug in at the windows.

No, he would not ask her "why?" but he would ask her "when?" and, hanging up the receiver, he opened the door and stepped out into a world filled with sunshine, the perfume of flowers and the song of birds.

In a Theater.

The Reign of Aunt Eunice

By Monte Darrell

IT is time to dress, Arletta, if you are going to the Mission Circle," Eunice Sprague reminded her sister-in-law coldly. She made her disapproval of Arletta felt at all times.

"I'm not going today, Eunice," Arletta answered briefly.

Eunice sniffed, but said nothing, and soon departed in a silence that said volumes.

Arletta Sprague was a bit over fifty and looked at least ten years younger. She had been a widow for many years, and lived in her own little bungalow ruled by Eunice.

Eunice had come to stay a little while when Ellis Sprague died. Having no home of her own, she decided without any urgent invitation, that it would be a comfortable abiding place. Therefore she sent for her belongings and settled herself to what she considered her mission; to see that her brother's widow did not make a fool of herself.

Arletta, usually called Grandma, sat idly by the window looking out on the village street long after Eunice had gone. It was Springtime, and her mind turned lightly to thoughts of new Easter bonnets, and such things, instead of love. To add greatly to her dissatisfaction, along came Lena Howell, middle-aged like herself but clad in gay raiment. Lena waved her hand gayly as she passed. Grandma responded somewhat absently.

That morning her small grandson, Gerry, had said: "Oh, Grandma, why do you and Aunt Eunice always wear black? I don't like it."

"Black is very serviceable and the most appropriate for women of our age, as you will understand some day," Eunice had answered harshly, before Grandma could speak.

Grandma wasted that whole afternoon rocking and thinking. She could not have done it in peace if Eunice had been at home, for Eunice thought it a sin to be idle.

Grandma had set her heart on a gray silk. Once when she and Eunice had been on their annual shopping expedition she had expressed that preference, but Eunice had snorted so fiercely that Grandma had bought the usual black.

"It would be silly for a woman of your age to buy anything as light as that, besides being extravagant," asserted Eunice with authority.

"Possibly. But my age doesn't prevent my admiring it," said Grandma, mildly.

Grandma sighed. She was tired of being ruled by Eunice. She decided, after pondering for some time, that she would accept Judd Merriweather, and have a change. Eunice would have to hunt a new home.

Grandma smiled slightly. Judd had been a persistent suitor. He had preposd as many as ten times in the last ten years. Of course he was tired of living alone and shifting for himself. Sympathy for his loneliness tipped the scales in his favor.

Grandma's quiet afternoon soothed her nerves. Having arrived at a decision concerning the future helped some, too. Her cordial greeting of Eunice upon the latter's return elicited only the usual sniff. Eunice did not appreciate cheerful manners. Grandma was sure that her sister-in-law had actually been congealed by her own frozen manner.

The next morning Grandma donned her last year's black silk and slipped away without telling Eunice where she was going. She was going on a shopping expedition without being personally conducted.

Arrived in town, she walked briskly up the busy street. A beauty-shop sign arrested her attention, and she stopped to look at the display. After a moment's consideration, she stepped inside and had a clay pack.

Grandma was enjoying immensely her day of freedom from censorship. She rested comfortably in front of the mirror awaiting the results said to come from using a clay pack. Rolling her eyes, she caught a glimpse of the gray mask, and chuckled to herself. She thought how Eunice would look, if she only could see her now. Then Grandma laughed so hilariously that she cracked the clay and had to have it repaired.

After her beauty treatment Grandma went shopping, and it was nearly ten time when she descended to the platform at the station of her own home town. She was becomingly attired in soft, gray silk, with a small hat to match. Moreover, she had acquired a new suitcase, and her arms overflowed with bundles.

The first person she met was her son, Gerry, who had come for an express package.

"Why, Mother, how nice you look! Where've you been and where's Aunt Eunice?" He looked expectantly past her.

"At home, I suppose, I ran away this morning, and I have been shopping. Being over 21, I thought I would go once without being personally conducted."

"Oh, I see." There was an understanding twinkle in Gerry's eyes. "Is all this baggage yours?" She nodded, and he proceeded to load it into his car. "Come Mother, I will see you safely home."

Eunice met them at the door in outraged dignity. She looked Grandma up and down with condemnation written all over her face. "The very idea of a woman of your age—" she began.

"Aunt Eunice," interrupted Gerry, sternly, "don't you think a woman of Mother's age is old enough to do as she pleases occasionally—especially on her own premises?"

"Doesn't she always do as she likes?" retorted Eunice hotly.

"Scarcely," replied Gerry drily.

"Never mind, Gerry. Come in and see my trousseau," invited Grandma. She opened the suitcase and bundles, displaying to Eunice's scandalized eyes gowns in pink, blue and lavender.

"Good for you, Mother. You have already lost 20 years somewhere." Gerry looked at her appreciatively. "Did you say it was your trousseau? Who is the lucky man?"

"Judd Merrimeather," answered his mother, coloring delicately.

The errand boy was hugging a life-sized dressmaker's dummy through the shopping crowds when a passing carman noticed his embarrassment and at once lifted the helpful voice.

"Hurry up, Romeo," he shouted. "Her father's after you."

Tech-Presidents Battle Today On Pittsburgh Soil

Carnegie Tech Entertains Hopes Of Downing W. & J. In Annual Conflict

Pitt. Panthers. Play. In Des Moines; Tri-State Colleges Are Active

By REGIS CURRAN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 15.—Today's brightest star in the western Pennsylvania football firmament shone at Forbes field here where the teams of Carnegie Tech and Washington-Jefferson meet this afternoon in gridiron combat.

There was no favorite in the betting, if any, because it was the first time each eleven had met an opponent of major importance this season.

Tech, although generally believed to be weakened by the loss of four regulars from last year, nevertheless expected to win. The Skibos placed their confidence in two men—one, a Chicago jurist, Walter P. Steffen, advisory coach who commutes between the Windy City to Tech's important games; the other, Coach Bob Waddell, chief legate of Steffen.

These two are alleged to have been directly back of a daring plot whereby the empty chair of King Football, 1926, was pulled away from Notre Dame, pretender to the throne, just as the Indiana Irish were about to sit themselves down in the royal thing.

Wash-Jeff rooters believed their backfield stars were too slippery and would break away many a time and oft during the conflict. Last year the Presidents swamped the Scotch, 17-6, principally because the Tartans could not stop the open-field running of W. & J.'s backs.

Pitt in Mid-West.

Much interest was registered in Pitt's clash with Drake at Des Moines, Iowa, today. Pitt was expected to win, but Panther adherents were just a wee bit fearful that Pitt would become overconfident because of its 40-0 victory over West Virginia; that Drake would be fighting mad because of the spanking administered it by the Navy; and that as a result Pitt would have a great fall.

Westminster meets Alleghen, at Meadville. The Methodists were by far the favorites, but word came out of New Wilmington that Westminster would bend every effort to bend old man dope into a pretzel.

Waynesburg went to Clarksburg, West Virginia to meet West Virginia Wesleyan. The Greene county eleven still was a bit downcast because of the physician's order that Captain "Bull" McCleary, backfield star, remains out of football for the rest of this year at least.

Juniata college was to travel from Huntingdon to Grove City only to be trampled under cleats by Grove City college, according to the past records of both teams.

Duquesne university will tangle with Bethany at Bethany, W. Va. Last year they played a scoreless tie, but this year the critics have seen much improvement in the Dukes' play, and no surprise will be shown over a Duquesne victory.

Grid Contests To Draw Crowds

Expect About 1,500,000 Persons To Witness Grid Games In Country Today

NAVY-NOTRE DAME GAME HEADLINES

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Early season records for football attendance are likely to be shattered today, which will see more first-class teams in major games than any previous early season date in the past. The biggest crowds are those expected at the Navy-Notre Dame game in Baltimore, the Northwestern-Ohio State battle at Columbus, O., and the Stanford-Southern California game at Palo Alto. These three games together are expected to draw more than 150,000 spectators.

Here in New York, New York University and Fordham will play before 50,000 at the Yankee Stadium and Columbia and Colgate will entertain approximately 18,000 at Baker Field. Yale and Brown, at New Haven, will play the host to another 50,000, and 40,000 are expected to turn out to see Harvard and Holy Cross in their annual tilt in the Harvard Stadium. Then in Philadelphia 60,000 and 70,000 are expected for the Pennsylvania-Penn State contest, always one of the most largely attended games on the Pennsylvania schedule.

Chicago and Purdue probably will draw close to 50,000 at Chicago, and 30,000 are expected for the Michigan-Wisconsin game at Madison. Another crowd approaching the 40,000 mark will see the Alabama-Georgia Tech game at Atlanta.

In all the day's football games will probably be seen by well over 1,500,000 persons, the length and breadth of the land.

Dodgers Secure Davy Bancroft

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Pennant dreams were revived six months in advance in Brooklyn today as a result of the club's acquisition of Dave Bancroft, manager and shortstop of the Boston Braves.

Bancroft, a ten-year man, was signed by Wilbert Robinson, president and manager of the Robins, immediately after being granted an unconditional release by President Emil E. Fuchs of the Boston club. It was freely predicted today that Bancroft would be made manager of the Brooklyn team when Uncle Robbie decides to retire.

It is understood that Bancroft will be paid $20,000 by Brooklyn.

Brown And Yale Clash Today In New Haven Bowl

(International News Service)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 15.—Brown and Yale, meeting here this afternoon in the thirty-first revival of what has come to be a New England football classic, attracted thirty thousand people to Yale bowl, under weather conditions ideal for players and spectators alike. Coach "Tuss" McLaughry, of Brown, had six of his "iron men" of last season on hand as the basis of his team today, and "Tad" Jones started Yale's sturdy regulars who crushed down Bowdoin two weeks ago and who last week barely lost to Georgia.

WILD PUTTERS I HAVE KNOWN — BY FEG MURRAY

"Putt," according to a "Glossary of technical terms employed in the game of golf" in Spalding's Golf Guide, means "to play the delicate shots close to the hole." As at least half the strokes of a par round of golf are taken on the putting greens, it is easy to see how important the club that makes "the delicate shorts close to the hole" is. And right there lies the trouble with many a player's putting. The ball goes close to the hole, but not into it.

Ever since the late Walter Travis went over to England in 1904 and won the British amateur championship with his Schenectady putter, freak clubs for use on the greens have been turned out in large numbers, and the best way I can describe some of them is that the imaginative, grotesque creations of my own in the above cartoon are not very different from some actually on sale.

The Royal and Ancient Golf Club of Scotland immediately barred the Schenectady type of putter from future British championships, but Mr. Travis had already won the cup and it was more or less a case of locking the stable door after the horse had been stolen. Only Walter Travis was guilty of no bit of thievery, for the type of putter that he used and variations of it are quite legal in America. The "Dear Old Ladies of St. Andrews" kicked because the shaft of the Schenectady putter was not fixed at the heel of the club, but at a point above a third of the way from the heel to the other end (the toe, perhaps!). A club like that is O. K. says the United States Golf Association, but it bars other clubs of the mallet-headed type.

"The U. S. G. A. will not sanction any substantial departure from the traditional and accepted form and make of golf clubs," so say the rules. Also, "the ball must be fairly struck at with the head of the club, not pushed, scraped, nor spooned." Mr. Folger's croquet style of putting while all right in a friendly little game, would never do in a sanctioned tournament. No, indeed! Neither would Nick Altrock's billiard-style putting, using the end of the shaft handle to hit the ball, while lying down on the green on his stomach.

There have been many novel putting methods besides those of Mr. Du Pre and Mr. Fogler. Some golfers have been content to be only unorthodox enough to putt with one hand, while others have gone so far as to putt kneeling down. Putters with foot-long shafts and putters with a projecting handle like a scythe have been tried out by various ambitious, though eccentric golfers.

Feg Murray Says—

It's about time for some football writer to make the annual mistake of mentioning the Oberlin-Miami game as an "intersectional" battle. (Miami College is located at Oxford, Ohio—not in Florida.)

Ben Franklin High Beats Chicora 21-0

Franklin Football Team Shows Reversal Of Form And Trounces Chicora

Locals Open Up With Heavy Attack In First Half And Outclass Visitors

Ben Franklin high football team showed a complete reversal of form in their 21 to 0 victory over Chicora High, at the Franklin High stadium on Friday afternoon. Earlier in the week the Franklinites had tied with North street.

The Franklinites tallied in the first few minutes of play when Morgan broke away through an assorted field for the first touchdown after a gallop of 45 yards on a triple pass. The first quarter ended Franklin 6, Chicora 0.

In the second quarter the Franklin backfield behind splendid interference marched down the field and Mitchell plunged the center of the line for the second touchdown. Chicora choose to receive and were unable to advance the ball, their attempt to punt was blocked by Cunningham and recovered by Deep, this put Franklin in scoring position again and with the linemen opening gaping holes whenever called upon it was not long until Fabian crashed over for the third touchdown. A fake placement and a pass to Cunningham added the extra point after two previous attempts had failed.

Score 19-0 at Half.

The second half opened with a group of very determined Chicora boys taking the field and for a time it looked as if the visitors might uncover a few touchdowns, but their advance was soon quelled and the Franklin team began another march to the goal posts. On a double pass Morgan again broke away for a 30-yard run, but fumbled when tackled on the five yard line, the Chicora team attempted a line play but it was smeared by Franklin and the ball was downed behind the Chicora goal line for a safety and two more points for the Franklin team.

An opportunity to score another touchdown was lost in the fourth quarter when the Franklin team was penalized for holding with only a yard to go. McCurdy played well for Franklin high at a guard position, and also a good game on the offensive especially as an interferer.

Cunningham at an end job played a bang-up game and broke up many plays directed at his side of the line. Mitchell and Morgan were the big guns in the Franklin High backfield and gained considerable yardage.

The biggest crowd of the year witnessed the game. The Ben Franklin High band under the leadership of Mr. Sutherland pepped up the game and the Franklin High cheerleaders, Charles Perotta and John Bartley were much in evidence in the cheering section.

The lineup and summary:

Ben Franklin 21.		Chicora 0.

DELANEY WHIPS JACK RENAULT

Big Canadian Eliminated In Easy Fashion From Heavyweight Ranks

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Oct. 15—Jack Renault of Canada was eliminated from the heavyweight beak busting tournament last night at Madison Square Garden by his compatriot Jack Delaney, but in winning Delaney failed to definitely establish himself as a giant killer.

Delaney slew his man rather easily, performing the beak busting specialty in the fourth round when a vicious right uppercut broke a small bone in the bridge of Renault's nose. But Delaney apparently had no zest for the kill. He was content to keep Renault off by spearing him with lazy left jabs to the head or soft hooks to the stomach.

It is our opinion that, since President Coolidge's vacation has ended, one could almost hear a pin drop in the Black Hills.—The Louisville Times.

Irish Favored To Down Navy

Odds Favor Notre Dame To Defeat Naval Academy Team This After noon

(International News Service)

BALTIMORE, Oct. 15.—Although Notre Dame is favored to defeat the Naval Academy football eleven on the municipal stadium gridiron here this afternoon in a game which has assumed championship proportions, there is a distinct feeling that the big Navy team with its powerful line and speedy backfield, may spring a surprise on Knute Rockne and his Irishmen from South Bend.

Navy has a green and relatively inexperienced team this year but it has had a long siege of training under the skilful guiding hand of Bill Ingram and has developed not only a powerful line but one of the fastest backfields that has ever graced an Annapolis outfit. On the other hand, Notre Dame is regarded by many as having the best eleven it has sent out since the days of the "four horsemen", with the usual cast iron line and a humming backfield in which Flanagan is the ace and Wahman a constant threat.

One of the biggest crowds that has ever seen a game in Baltimore, barring that which attended the Army-Navy clash here three years ago, will be on hand for the game. It is estimated that more than 50,000 will see the two teams come together with virtually all of official Washington on hand to root for the middies. It is the first big game of the year for the Navy and success will set it forth prominently as one of the strongest teams in the east if not in the entire country.

PENN FAVORED TO BEAT STATE

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—The victory in 20 of their 28 former meetings, the University of Pennsylvania eleven meets Penn State this afternoon on Franklin field, a big favorite to win because of the victory over Brown last week, while Penn State lost to Bucknell.

A hardfought contest was anticipated because eight of the 11 Penn State gridders who helped hold Penn to a 3-0 score last year were in the line-up again. Penn will use the same team that upset Brown, with the exception of Monk at guard in place of Utz.

HALL OF FAME

Nominating George Gauthier.

Because he has shown outstanding ability and has been mentioned frequently in connection with coaching positions at major institutions.

Because he was a four-letter man in high school, winning his honors in baseball, basketball, football and track.

Because he was quarterback on the Michigan Aggie team of 1912 that gave Michigan and Wisconsin both a 13-7 licking.

Last Nights Fights

Bruce Flowers, negro lightweight of New Rochelle, N. Y., won decision over Sammy Vogel, New York, 10 rounds.

George Larocco, New York heavyweight, outpointed Jack McAuliffe II, Detroit, 10 rounds.

AT SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Bucky Lawless, Auburn, N. Y., won decision over Billy Leonard, Syracuse, welterweight, six rounds.

AT BOSTON—"Honeyboy" Finegan, Boston junior lightweight, won decision over Jimmy Sacco, also of Boston, 10 rounds.

Rocco And Seifert May Fight Again

It is understood that Promoter Al Zill, Youngstown, is trying to rematch Sandy Seifert and Emmett Rocco for a return bout at Youngstown, October 25. On Tuesday night Rocco defeated Seifert. It was a fight all the 10 rounds.

SPORDS POINTS

Gophers Loom As Conference Contenders

Minnesota looms up this year as one of the powerful teams of the Western Conference.

With the classiest collection of ball carriers in the Big Ten and the coaching genius of Dr. C. W. Spears, who is able now to devote more time than his health permitted him to give last fall, the Gophers should cut a bigger figure than they did a year ago.

Already the driving power of Minnesota is shown in the results of their first two games against North Dakota and South Dakota. North Dakota took a 57 to 10 pasting, while South Dakota was glad to call it a day at 40 to 0.

And now, added to the congestion of backfield stars, that includes last Joesting, is Art Pharmer, a triple-threat man who has removed his ineligibility.

Last year Minnesota was slow to start. After winning its first game from North Dakota, the Gophers lost to Notre Dame, 20 to 7, and Michigan, 20 to 0, on successive Saturdays before they really got going.

It was lucky for Notre Dame that they met Minnesota when they did. Things might have been a little different later. As it was, Spears through sickness, was unable to be present at the game.

The second game with Michigan proved the improvement in the Gopher team. It was a nerve wracking struggle that ended with Michigan on the long end of a 7 to 6 count.

Minnesota had a decided advantage and looked like certain winners until Nydahl fumbled in midfield during the final stages of the game. Michigan's end, Oosterbaan, was quick to gather up the ball and raced the remaining distance for a touchdown. Friedman added the extra point.

Gilbert's Newest

This, in case you are at all interested in the subject, depicts Gilbert Roland's latest idea in love-making. It will be noticed that he first (probably by soft words) develops a soulful mood on the part of his lady fair—Mary Astor—then closes his eyes and kisses her on the corner of her chin. They are starred in "Rose of the Golden West."

Success Attends Country Club Dansant Here

One Hundred And Fifty "Step" To The Lively Tunes At Fall Dance At Club

ELLWOOD CITY, Oct. 15.—One hundred and fifty members of the Ellwood City Country club and their friends enjoyed a dance last night in the club house.

The important feature of the evening was the special orchestra, one of seven pieces that was on its toes every minute and furnished peppy music.

Programs were used and light refreshments served in the grill during the intermission. The success of last night's party assures the conducting of a Hallowe'en masquerade dance October 28. Announcement was also made concerning a dinner-bridge which will be given October 20 by the men's entertainment committee of the club. W. R. Johnston and his committee are to be congratulated on the success they are having with their October parties.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Craven, Miss Dorothy Hawkins and Mr. Frick of New Brighton.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

By NORMAN [illegible] BROWN

One of the bigge[illegible]ents of the current football season is to be staged Oct. 22, when the University of Michigan, which owes its football all to "Hurry Up" Yost, dedicates its new stadium with Ohia State University as guest—and foe.

Not alone because of the fact that it marks a milestone in the development of athletics or because of the fan flare and color of the event does it loom big. The outcome of the game itself may have a direct bearing on the Big Ten championship, for one thing.

If the Big Ten race turns out to be a nip and tuck battle with Michigan, Ohio State, Minnesota, Northwestern and Purdue all demanding a place in the sun, the team defeated in the coming fray at Ann Arbor may well be definitely eliminated by such a defeat.

The Michigan-Ohio State game is one of the blessed football affairs built on tradition to mean something more than a mere case of victory or defeat each year.

The two universities have been meeting on the gridiron every year, with few exceptions, since 1897. But it wasn't until 1919 that the Ohio aggregation succeeded in defeating Yost's team. Once riding the crest, State made the most of its strength and repeated the triumph in 1920 and again in 1921.

Five years ago State opened its stadium, a giant concrete affair seating something like 92,000 persons. Michigan was invited to help dedicate the field—and accepted the invitation. The Staters had high hopes of continuing their supremacy, too, but were forced to take a 19 to 0 beating. In the next three years they scored but once against Michigan. The Wolverine team won in 1923 by a score of 23 to 0, the following year 16 to 6, and the next fall 10 to 0.

Last year State, fighting desperately in her own bailiwick, had victory within her grasp, only to lose it when a well-meaning halfback pulled a mental bone.

The teams have met a total of 23 times since the first game in 1897. Fourteen of these games were played prior to 1913, at which time Michigan left the conference and Ohio State entered it. Of these 14 games, Michigan won 12 and State was able to tie two. Since Michigan's return to the conference in 1918 the teams have met nine times. Michigan has won six of the games and State three.

"Hurry Up" Yost, of course, has coached the Michigan elevens ever since the annual games were inaugurated. Jack Wilce has been responsible for the grid teams at State for something like half that time, so the game, among other things, is a perpetual battle between these two mentors.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

First Trans-Continental Railway—Part IV. by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

THE BUILDING OF THE FIRST RAILWAY TO THE PACIFIC WAS THE GREATEST ENGINEERING FEAT OF ITS DAY. FROM OMAHA, NEBRASKA, TO THE WEST COAST, IT STRETCHED 1500 MILES THROUGH BROAD PLAINS AND PARCHED DESERTS OVER RUGGED MOUNTAINS AND ACROSS YAWNING CHASMS.

THE INDIANS RESENTED THIS NEW INVASION OF THEIR HUNTING GROUNDS. THEY LOOKED WITH FEAR AND WONDERMENT UPON THE PUFFING LOCOMOTIVE, WHICH THEY CALLED "THE IRON HORSE."

IN PENETRATING THE INDIAN COUNTRY, THE CONSTRUCTION GANGS REQUIRED THE PROTECTION OF TROOPS. ALL THE WORKMEN WERE ARMED, AND OFTEN HAD TO DROP THEIR TOOLS TO BEAT OFF AN ATTACK OF THE HOSTILES.

IN SPITE OF THE CONSTANT DANGER OF INDIAN ATTACKS AND THE MANY HARDSHIPS ENCOUNTERED, THE RAILROAD BUILDERS KEPT ON WORKING WITH A WILL. THERE WAS GREAT RIVALRY BETWEEN THE WORKMEN OF THE CENTRAL PACIFIC AND THOSE OF THE UNION PACIFIC, EACH DIVISION STRIVING TO BE THE FIRST TO FINISH ITS ALLOTTED TASK.

AN ORDINANCE

Providing for the opening and grading of Leasure Avenue, between Mercer Street and Wilmington Avenue, and for the payment of the damages, costs and expenses thereof, and for the assessment thereof upon the abutting properties, according to benefits.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the Council of the City of New Castle, Pa., that Leasure Avenue, between Mercer Street and Wilmington Avenue, throughout its whole length, be opened and reduced to grade and graded its entire width, at the cost and expense of the abutting property owners, according to benefits, against which properties the said costs and expenses are hereby assessed, and the same are appropriated to the payment of the said work, which is to be done and paid for subject to the provisions of the General Improvement Ordinance of the said City, and its supplements and amendments, and other ordinances of the said City pertaining to grading. All damages resulting from the said improvement shall be assessed and paid for in the manner provided by law.

I, Cordelia Zeigler Jones, City Clerk, do hereby certify that the above and foregoing ordinance has been regularly introduced and is now pending in the council of the city of New Castle, Pa. In witness whereof, I hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of the city, this 30th day of September, 1927.

N. Y. STOCKS

By W. S. COUSINS
International News Service Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Industrial and specialty stocks which led Friday's closing rally continued to move upward at the beginning of trading today. Stocks of the mercantile companies and the Nickel Plate Railroad group were in good demand at a higher range of prices.

Aggressive forward movements were continued in General Asphalt, Radio, American Can, National Distiller, May Department Stores and other of yesterday's star performers.

Heavy liquidation of a number of the well-known independent oil stocks followed reports of possible further interruption of cash dividends in strong companies. Prairie Oil and Gas set the pace, and others are expected to follow. Pure Oil declined to the lowest price since the latter part of 1924. and Skelly and Phillips Petroleum were sold at a lower range of prices.

The can stocks, American and Continental, forged ahead in good form in the leadership of the manufacturing stocks, and Collins and Aikman, for the equipments, sold at the year's highest price above 94. American Linseed added 2 points to yesterday's 3½-point gain and reached a new high above 55. Preferred stock was also strong.

Railroad stocks pressed to the front in the final period. New Haven led the speculative rails, with a new advance to 54¾, and Chesapeake & Ohio, Erie, and Nickel Plate continued firm.

Collins and Aikman moved up confidently to above 96, for a new 5-point gain, while Texas Gulf Sulphur, International Paper, National Distillers and other new-comer specialties maintained their buoyancy until the close of the market. Oils firmed up in the final period, and sugar stocks were strong at the close.

Mayor Is Asked To Supply Wife

Youth Tells Court He Has No Girl But Anyone Will Do

MONESSEN, Pa., Oct. 14.—Mayor Carl Woodward, while presiding over police court, was called upon to act in a new capacity, when John Sapena, a 21-year-old youth, residing at Twelfth and Schoonmaker, appeared before him and requested a marriage license.

Inquiry revealed the fact that the youth had neither bride nor marriage license, but thought that the mayor could provide all the necessities. The prospective groom was asked if he had any particular girl in mind to become his bride, and he replied in the negative, stating that color, creed or class mattered not, if only he could get a wife.

He insisted on signing a paper for a license and finally court attaches gave him a jail committment which he readily signed and instead of wedding bells it is likely he will hear the call of the jailer.

Refuses New Trial To Man Convicted Of Sedition Charge

(Special To The News)

MERCER, Pa., Oct. 15.—Judge J. A. McLaughry today handed down a decision refusing a new trial to Tony Kovacovich of Farrell, tried in the April term of court, 1924, on a charge of sedition. Kovacovich has been out under $3,000 bail since that time and pending a decision on the question of granting him a new trial.

He and a companion were tried at the same time on the same charge, it being the first time in the history of the Mercer county courts that any person had been tried on this charge. The question of a new trial is also pending in the case of the other man.

They and four others were indicted, alleged members of the Workingman's Party of America, on the same charge. In the headquarters of the party at Farrell was found literature of a highly seditious nature, according to the testimony of Harry J. Lennon of Washington, D. C., a representative of the Department of Justice, on the occasion of the trial of Kovacovich and his companion.

The four men not tried but indicted with Kovacovich were out on bail, which they jumped and disappeared. Their present whereabouts are not known.

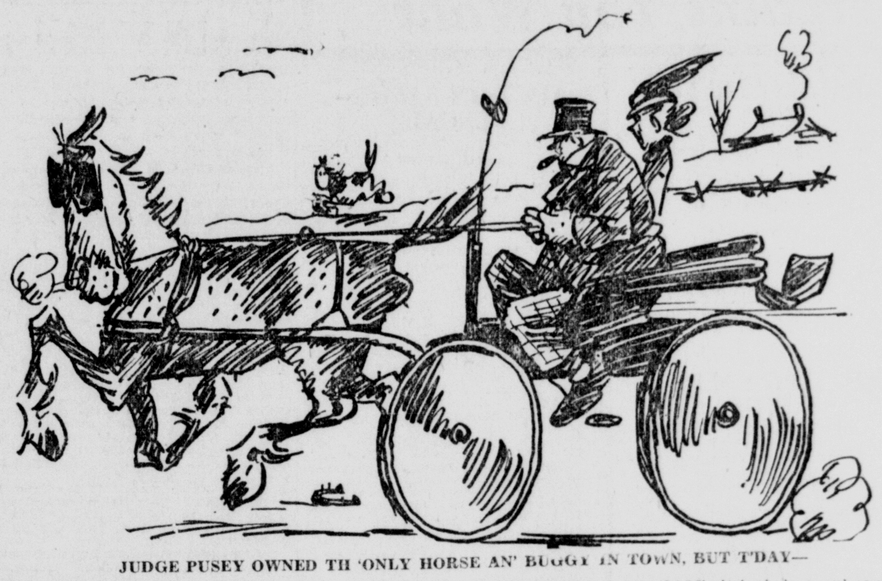
ABE MARTIN On Retrenchin'



JUDGE PUSEY OWNED TH 'ONLY HORSE AN' BUGGY IN TOWN, BUT T'DAY—

"Is Curbin' Expenses a Lost Art?" wuz th' subject of a paper read before th' Skunk Ridge Literary Club, Wednesday afternoon, by Miss Fawn Lippincut. Th' paper wuz a sly rebuke t' our extravagant manner o' livin', an' our mania fer tryin' t' outdo our neighbors. Miss Lippincut started out by sayin' that th' only luxury left worthy o' th' name is a yacht, Then she said:

"We used t' shine our own shoes, whereas t'day th' nation's shinin' bill is somethin' like $2,131,551.

"We used t' run three blocks t' see a dude, an' now we're all dudes.

"Farmers used t' farm, but now ther dressed up an' discontented.

"Short skirts have boosted th' cost o' lookin' nifty below th' knees t' sometin' like $62,000,000.

"Years ago doctors occasionally cut open somebuddy o' real consequence, but t'day ever'-buddy we meet has been ripped open, or is savin' up fer an operation.

"A few years ago Judge Pusey wuz th' only man in town who owned a horse an' buggy. T'day one can't go t' th' grocery without gittin' knocked down by a pleasure car.

"Fillin' stations are twice as thick as saloons used t' be, an' they serve no free lunch.

"We used t' keep butter in th' cellar, but now we have expensive electric refrigerators.

"A husband now spends as much on his wife's feet as he used t' spend all put t'gether.

"This nation spends fifty-one times as much tryin' out neuritis cures as it ever spent on liniment, an' neuritis shows no signs o' lettin' down.

"We used t' make a pitcher o' lemonade now an' then, but th' nation's soft drink bill fer one month would bridle th' Mississippi river, an' pay th' entire cost of enforcin' th' Volstead act fer two months.

"Men used t' have a wild, reckless Saturday night on 75 cents, includin' a shave an' Floridy water, but now they pay $12 fer a short quart, or fifth, t' say nothin' o' property damage.

"We used t' write pustal cards, but t'day we wire, or use th' long distance.

"We used t' save some money, but t'day we carry a little life insurance, an' spend ever'thing right up t' th' handle.

"Th' home used t' radiate gentle influences, but nowadays we send our daughters t' schools as fer removed from home as possible.

"Calico an' underwear are no longer worn, 'cept in reformatories.

Bessemer Doctor Makes Address

Dr. F. D. Campbell Is Speaker At Session Of Lawrence County Medical Society

Monthly meeting of the Lawrence County Medical society was held Thursday evening in the society room at the Y. M. C. A. There was a good atendance of the members and a number of interesting matters were considered.

The speaker of the evening was Dr. F. D. Campbell of Bessemer, who spoke on the "Management of Emergency Surgery." He stressed the point that first aid has much to do with the success attained in such cases. People should try and learn the more simple methods to be employed in cases of injury where surgery becomes necessary. They should know what to do in case of an accident. The first dressing of an injury is most important, he said. Cleanliness is one of the more important things to be considered. Dirt should be kept from the injury. He also discussed fracture cases and in his remarks and in the discussion that followed the necessity of an X-Ray picture was emphasized. They should not only be taken to determine if there is a fracture but also where it is and what are its characteristics. A picture should also be taken later to determine if the fracture has been properly set and the ends of the fractured bone are together in the correct manner.

In the time of discussion the facts concerning the plans of the new hospital were also considered at some length. Reports were made concerning conference that have been held by a committee of the society and a committee from the board of directors of the hospital. The physicians are doing everything possible to make the new hospital a successful proposition and are co-operating in every way with the directors of the institution in securing the very best possible in the construction of the hospital and in accordance with the latest ideas in their profession.

Champion Husband Caller Is Selected

(International News Service)

SUFFOLK, Va., Oct. 15.—The hog-calling championship of the world may still be in dispute, but all the world today knows who the champion husband-caller is.

Folks, meet Mrs. L. C. Latimer of Carrollton, Va., unanimously acclaimed by three judges, all seasoned married men, to be the most adept mate-summoner of them all. She won her title yesterday at the Suffolk, Va., fair, and today the woods near Carrollton are echoing back her voice as she pages her lesser half with renewed and triumphant vigor.

"Lin, O you Linwood, come to supper, darling."

That's the call that did it.

Large Crowd Of Collegians Hear Sherwood Eddy

(Special To The News)

NEW WILMINGTON, Oct. 15. — Before a packed student body, Sherwood Eddy, internationally famous Y. M. C. A. lecturer, delivered his concluding chapel talk Friday, concerning "Religion as a Testimony." The vital question that formed the main thread of his well organized speech dealth with the interrogation, "Can you still believe in religion?"

At 3 o'clock on Friday he addressed the women of the Blue and White institution, and completed his Westminster visit with another talk delivered to the men of the college at an informal dinner under the auspices of the college "Y" organization, held in the United Presbyterian church basement at 6:30 p. m., Friday.

Dr. Sherwood Eddy's visitation was received with much enthusiasm by the Westminster student body, his style of presentation impressing.
